

Government has no authority by administrative action or interpretation to increase the scope, or otherwise to alter the meaning, of the provisions of the Headquarters Agreement beyond their purport, as approved by the Congress of the United States.

There has been no difficulty in those cases where the families and more specifically the wives of these representatives were admissible to the United States under the United States immigration laws quite apart from the Headquarters Agreement. The difficulty arises in the cases of family members who, under the immigration laws, are not admissible because of present or past political beliefs or present or past membership or activity in or association with certain political organizations.

This problem was the subject of an inquiry and a resolution of the United Nations Correspondents Association in November, 1949, wherein the Association called upon the Secretary General of the United Nations "... to use every effort to secure from the United States Government an administrative interpretation of the Headquarters Agreement, which, in accord with its spirit and intent, will ensure that families may accompany or join correspondents during their assignment at UN headquarters." At a special general meeting on March 7, 1950, the Association approved a subsequent resolution urging "... revision of the Headquarters Agreement and parallel agreements with other governments to afford protection to correspondents' families and free access or entry to the permanent United Nations Headquarters and other areas where the United Nations and its agencies function on the same terms as bona fide correspondents." In May of 1950, this matter was also the subject of a resolution by the United Nations Sub-Commission on Freedom of Information and of the Press when at its fourth session in Montevideo it noted the absence of any provision aimed at facilitating the entry of wives and families of accredited news personnel and found that this could hinder the work of news personnel through hardship and the disruption of families. The Sub-Commission in its resolution drew the attention of the Economic and Social Council to this situation with the recommendation that the Council take such action as it might consider necessary under the circumstances.

On April 6, 1950, the Department received an Aide-Mémoire from the United Nations Assistant Secretary General for Legal Affairs formally requesting that an appropriate amendment to Section 11 of the Headquarters Agreement be made or that consideration be given to the advisability of this Government entering into a supplemental agreement with the United Nations, which would extend the privileges granted to families of representatives of Members and of
