Soviet Researches On Luminescence:

Soviet Researches on Luminescence D. V. Skobel'tsyn, 2013-11-11 It is well known that luminescence is the term used to describe the excess radiation from a body over and above the thermal radiation and persisting for a time which greatly exceeds the period of a light vibration The first half of this definition proposed by Wiedemann distinguishes luminescence from equilibrium thermal radiation the second half introduced by Vavilov distinguishes luminescence from various forms of scattering and from induced radiation such as Vavilov Cherenkov radiation etc Distinctions are made between photo cathode x ray and other forms of luminescence depending on how energy is introduced into the luminescent body Electroluminescence is the name given to that form of fluorescence in which the radiating body receives energy directly from an electric field It should be noted that luminescence under the influence of cathode rays is not called electroluminescence because in this case the necessary energy is not supplied directly from the electric field to the radiating body but by means of extraneous electrons Electroluminescence of gaseous bodies radiation from a gas discharge has been known for a long time and is widely used in luminescent lamps and gas discharge tubes In 1923 Losev IJ observed radiation from silicon carbide crystals when a voltage was applied to them directly

Basov,2012-12-06 This volume which comprises a collection of papers by leading Soviet researchers is devoted to topics in the luminescence of semiconductors An experimental check is made on a series of predictions of the theory of ionization domains A new low voltage luminescence of zinc sulfide is described and investigated and is found to be due to a high frequency electrical instability A detailed study of the electrical properties of the instability and of the characteristics of the emission testifies to the pre breakdown character of the electroluminescence and to the acousto electrical nature of the instability The luminescence excitation spectra of AlN crystals excited in the region of the fundamental absorption contain lines belonging to excitons and their phonon replicas The symmetry of the electronic and vibrational transitions corresponding to parts of these lines is interpreted The results of a study of the scattering of light by electron hole drops in germanium are cited The results are discussed on the basis of a theory of exciton condensation in which allowance is made for the diffusion of excitons toward the surface of the drops and for the surface tension of the electron hole liquid This volume will be of interest to a wide range of scientific workers particularly those engaged in the study of luminescence and physics of semiconductors
