Compendium of the Microbiological Spoilage of Foods and Beverages William H. Sperber, Michael P. Doyle, 2009-09-23

The increased emphasis on food safety during the past two decades has decreased the emphasis on the loss of food through spoilage particularly in developed countries where food is more abundant. In these countries spoilage is a commercial issue that affects the profit or loss of producers and manufacturers. In lesser developed countries spoilage continues to be a major concern. The amount of food lost to spoilage is not known. As will be evident in this text, stability and the type of spoilage are influenced by the inherent properties of the food and many other factors. During the Second World War a major effort was given to developing the technologies needed to ship foods to different regions of the world without spoilage. The food was essential to the military and to populations in countries that could not provide for themselves. Since then progress has been made in improved product formulations, processing, packaging and distribution systems. New products have continued to evolve but for many new perishable foods product stability continues to be a limiting factor. Many new products have failed to reach the marketplace because of spoilage issues.

Quality Assurance in Spices and Spice Products, Nonthermal Plasma Technology for Food and Food Products R. Mahendran, Preeti Birwal, Megh R. Goyal, 2025-04-15

Cold plasma technology in the food industry is increasingly being adopted for its effective decontamination of food from foodborne pathogens and for its ability for enhanced pest mitigation in stored products. This new volume explores the techniques and methods of processing food products without subjecting them to heat treatment using the promising cutting edge technology of cold plasma for food preservation and food safety. The book discusses the design and generation of cold plasma along with the interaction with food molecules and covers applications in agricultural food systems such as in solid foods, liquid foods and food packaging. It presents the effects of cold plasma on starch modification, food surface modification and its influence on toxin reduction. It also reports on advances and research being conducted to deal with simulation modeling and emerging other combination technologies. A chapter also reports on adopting cold plasma for spaceflight grown produce.

Turmeric Kamala Krishnaswamy, 2006* Innovative Food Processing Technologies, 2020-08-18

Food process engineering, a branch of both food science and chemical engineering, has evolved over the years since its inception and still is a rapidly changing discipline. While traditionally the main objective of food process engineering was preservation and stabilization, the focus today has shifted to enhance health aspects, flavour and taste, nutrition, sustainable production, food security and also to ensure more diversity for the increasing demand of consumers. The food industry is becoming increasingly competitive and dynamic and strives to develop high quality freshly prepared food products. To achieve this objective, food manufacturers are today presented with a growing array of new technologies that have the potential to improve or replace conventional processing technologies to deliver higher quality and better consumer targeted food products which meet many if not all of the demands of the modern consumer. These new or innovative technologies are in various stages of development including some still at the R D stage and others that have been commercialised as alternatives to conventional processing technologies Food process engineering comprises a series of unit operations traditionally applied in the food industry One major component of these operations relates to the application of heat directly or indirectly to provide foods free from pathogenic microorganisms but also to enhance or intensify other processes such as extraction separation or modification of components The last three decades have also witnessed the advent and adaptation of several operations processes and techniques aimed at producing high quality foods with minimum alteration of sensory and nutritive properties Some of these innovative technologies have significantly reduced the thermal component in food processing offering alternative nonthermal methods Food Processing Technologies A Comprehensive Review Three Volume Set covers the latest advances in innovative and nonthermal processing such as high pressure pulsed electric fields radiofrequency high intensity pulsed light ultrasound irradiation and new hurdle technology Each section will have an introductory article covering the basic principles and applications of each technology and in depth articles covering the currently available equipment and or the current state of development food quality and safety application to various sectors food laws and regulations consumer acceptance advancements and future scope It will also contain case studies and examples to illustrate state of the art applications Each section will serve as an excellent reference to food industry professionals involved in the processing of a wide range of food categories e g meat seafood beverage dairy eggs fruits and vegetable products spices herbs among others
