

Writing a thesis can be a daunting and overwhelming task. It requires extensive research, critical thinking, and strong writing skills. Many students find themselves struggling to complete their thesis on time and with the required quality. It is not uncommon for students to feel stressed and anxious while working on their thesis.

One of the biggest challenges of writing a thesis is following the correct format. Depending on your field of study, your thesis may need to follow a specific style guide. One popular style guide is the Chicago style, which is commonly used in the fields of history, literature, and the arts.

The Chicago style has its own set of rules and guidelines for formatting your thesis. This includes the layout of your title page, table of contents, footnotes, and bibliography. It also has specific guidelines for citing sources and formatting your references. With so many rules to follow, it can be easy to make mistakes and lose valuable points on your thesis.

Another challenge of writing a thesis is the time and effort it takes. Researching and writing a thesis can take months, if not years, and it requires a lot of dedication and hard work. Many students struggle to balance their thesis with other responsibilities such as work, family, or other coursework.
