read for students of literature The Progress of Music in Ireland Harry White, 2005 This book collects a number of essays on the relationship between music cultural history and musicology in Ireland which taken together comprise a natural progression from the author's widely acclaimed monograph The Keeper's Recital 1998 The progress of music in Ireland contains essays on contemporary music and musical infrastructures in Ireland on Irish musical nationalism in the context of German and Czech traditions on the presence of music in the work of Brian Friel and Samuel Beckett on Joyce and music on university education and Irish musical education on the discourse of musicology in Ireland and on the work of Brian Boydell and Aloys Fleischmann as pioneers in Irish musical scholarship Concert Life in Eighteenth-Century Britain Susan Wollenberg, 2017-07-05 In recent years there has been a considerable revival of interest in music in eighteenth century Britain This interest has now expanded beyond the consideration of composers and their music to include the performing institutions of the period and their relationship to the wider social scene The collection of essays presented here offers a portrayal of concert life in Britain that contributes greatly to the wider understanding of social and cultural life in the eighteenth century Music was not merely a pastime but was irrevocably linked with its social political and literary contexts The perspectives of performers organisers patrons audiences publishers copyists and consumers are considered here in relation to the concert experience All of the essays taken together construct an understanding of musical communities and the origins of the modern concert system This is achieved by focusing on the development of music societies the promotion of musical events the mobility and advancement of musicians systems of patronage the social status of musicians the repertoire performed and published the role of women pianists and the topography of concerts In this way the book will not only appeal to music specialists but also to social and cultural historians Seóirse Bodley Gareth Cox, 2010 Gareth Cox provides a compelling overview of the career and creative achievement of one of Ireland's foremost living composers Seóirse Bodley He documents the context from which Bodley's work has emerged over the course of the last sixty years and he discusses its most significant technical features This first full length study of Bodley's life and work will appeal to a wide range of readers and musicians both specialist and amateur and most importantly it will encourage more performers to study play and record Bodley's music Aloys Fleischmann Séamas De Barra, 2006 The Musical Life of Nineteenth-Century Belfast Roy Johnston, 2017-07-05 Roy Johnston and Declan Plummer provide a refreshing portrait of Belfast in the nineteenth century Before his death Roy Johnston had written a full draft based on an impressive array of contemporary sources with deep and detailed attention especially to contemporary newspapers With the deft and sensitive contribution of Declan Plummer the finished book offers a telling view of Belfast's thriving musical life Largely without the participation and example of local aristocracy nobility and gentry Belfast's musical society was formed largely by the townspeople themselves in the eighteenth century and by several instrumental and choral societies in the nineteenth century As the town grew in size and developed an industrial character its townspeople identified increasingly with the large industrial towns and cities of the British mainland

Efforts to place themselves on the principal touring circuit of the great nineteenth century concert artists led them to build a concert hall not in emulation of Dublin but of the British industrial towns Belfast audiences had experienced English opera in the eighteenth century and in due course in the nineteenth century they found themselves receiving the touring opera companies in theatres newly built to accommodate them Through an energetic groundwork revision of contemporary sources Johnston and Plummer reveal a picture of sustained vitality and development that justifies Belfast's prominent place the history of nineteenth century musical culture in Ireland and more broadly in the British Isles

The Journals and Letters of Susan Burney Philip Olleson,2016-03-09 Susan Burney 1755 1800 was the third daughter of the music historian Charles Burney and the younger sister of the novelist Frances Fanny Burney She grew up in London where she was able to observe at close quarters the musical life of the capital and to meet the many musicians men of letters and artists who visited the family home After her marriage in 1782 to Molesworth Phillips a Royal Marines officer who served with Captain Cook on his last voyage she lived in Surrey and later in rural Ireland Burney was a knowledgeable enthusiast for music and particularly for opera with discriminating tastes and the ability to capture vividly musical life and the personalities involved in it Her extensive journals and letters a selection from which is presented here provide a striking portrait of social domestic and cultural life in London the Home Counties and in Ireland in the late eighteenth century They are of the greatest importance and interest to music and theatre historians and also contain much that will be of significance and interest for Burney scholars social historians of England and Ireland women s historians and historians of the family

"Music in the British Provinces, 1690-1914" Peter Holman,2017-07-05 The period covered by this volume roughly from Purcell to Elgar has traditionally been seen as a dark age in British musical history Much has been done recently to revise this view though research still tends to focus on London as the commercial and cultural hub of the British Isles It is becoming increasingly clear however that by the mid eighteenth century musical activity outside London was highly distinctive in terms of its reach the way it was organized and its size richness and quality There was an extraordinary amount of musical activity of all sorts in provincial theatres and halls in the amateur orchestras and choirs that developed in most towns of any size in taverns and convivial clubs in parish churches and dissenting chapels and of course in the home This is the first book to concentrate specifically on musical life in the provinces bringing together new archival research and offering a fresh perspective on British music of the period The essays brought together here testify to the vital role played by music in provincial culture not only in socializing and networking but in regional economies and rivalries demographics and class dynamics religion and identity education and recreation and community and the formation of tradition Most important perhaps as our focus shifts from London to the regions new light is shed on neglected figures and forgotten repertoires all of them worthy of reconsideration

The Musical Traditions of Northern Ireland and Its Diaspora David Cooper, 2010 Northern Ireland remains a divided community in which traditional culture is widely understood as a marker of religious affiliation and ethnic identity David Cooper provides an analysis of the characteristics of traditional music performed in Northern Ireland as well as an ethnographic and ethnomusicological study of a group of traditional musicians from County Antrim In particular he offers a consideration of the cultural dynamics of Northern Ireland with respect to traditional music
