THE KEPT MAN OF THE PRINCESS KNIGHT

The Man Who Kept The Secrets

Thomas Powers

The Man Who Kept The Secrets:

New York Magazine, 1979-10-22 New York Magazine was born in 1968 after a run as an insert of the New York Herald Tribune and quickly made a place for itself as the trusted resource for readers across the country. With award winning writing and photography covering everything from politics and food to theater and fashion, the magazine's consistent mission has been to reflect back to its audience the energy and excitement of the city itself while celebrating New York as both a place and an idea.

The Man who Kept the Secrets Thomas Powers, 1979 Richard Helms is the quintessential CIA man. For thirty years from the very inception of the Central Intelligence Agency and before he occupied pivotal positions in that shadowy world, OSS operator, spymaster, planner and plotter, and finally for more than six years Agency director. No other man was so closely and personally involved over so long a period with so many CIA activities, successful and otherwise. His story is the story of the CIA and in portraying Helms's extraordinary career, Pulitzer Prize winning author Thomas Powers has in fact written the first comprehensive inside history of the CIA itself. It is a history moreover that is entirely uncensored. While the information on which it is based has been drawn from intensive interviews with dozens of former key Agency officials, including Helms himself, as well as from exhaustive research through hundreds of published and unpublished sources, the author is not subject to the kind of legal restraints that have burdened others writing about the CIA. The result is a picture of the Agency more objective, more complete and more revealing than any hitherto available. And because it is written with an eye for character and anecdote, it is as readable as it is important.

Here for example is the full story of the long running plot first launched by Dwight Eisenhower and pressed by the Kennedys to kill Fidel Castro, of the overthrow of the Arbenz government in Guatemala in 1954, of the disastrous and little known CIA operation in Indonesia in the mid 1950s, of the Bay of Pigs adventure, including a persuasive revisionist analysis of why it was doomed, of CIA involvement in Vietnam and Laos and the desperate attempts to change the course of Chilean politics. Here too are the personalities that created and shaped the CIA: Frank Wisner, one of Helms's executive predecessors, being treated for a nervous breakdown and warning a nurse to control thousands of goons; Allen Dulles telling his favorite story about passing up in favor of a tennis game yet another boring interview with yet another fanatical Russian exile in Switzerland during World War I and later finding out that it had been Lenin; the odd genius of Richard Bissell who triumphantly created the U-2 high level reconnaissance program and then superintended the Bay of Pigs fiasco; James Angleton, the man who raised suspicion to an art form as counterintelligence chief; E. Howard Hunt, Helms's favorite spy novelist he hated; Le Carré, the maverick undercover man who when asked by an old CIA colleague what he was doing in Nixon's White House replied, "Well, you know, political work." And many more.

At the center of it all is Richard Helms, the man who kept the secrets, who at the end of his long career found himself charged with perjury for doing what he conceived to be his job: lying to a Senate investigating committee. It is said, writes Powers, that men begin life with a tabula rasa. Helms ended it that way. Yet as this book makes clear, the dilemma of Richard Helms is not his alone, but a conflict of principle in many ways inherent in the Agency itself and in a society that insists on creating such an institution and then letting it go its way With the publication of this book we are at last in a position to see to understand and to judge the CIA Dust jacket
