Maps of Experience Andie Diane Palmer, 2005-01-01 In many North American indigenous cultures history and stories are passed down not by the written word but by oral tradition In Maps of Experience Andie Diane Palmer draws on stories recorded during travels through Secwepemc or Shuswap hunting and gathering territory with members of the Alkali Lake Reserve in Interior British Columbia Palmer examines how the various kinds of talk allow knowledge to be carried forward reconstituted reflected upon enriched and ultimately relocated by and for new interlocutors in new experiences and places Maps of Experience demonstrates how the Secwepemc engagement in the traditional practices of hunting and gathering create shared lived experiences between individuals while recreating a known social context in which existing knowledge of the land may be effectively shared and acted upon When the narratives of fellow travellers are pooled through discursive exchange they serve as what can be considered a map of experience providing the basis of shared understanding and social relationship to territory Palmer's analysis of ways of listening and conveying information within the Alkali Lake community brings new insights into indigenous language and culture as well as to the study of oral history ethnohistory experimental ethnography and discourse analysis

Into the Gateway Catherine Chaput, Amy Pason, 2022-06-08 This book advances the trend toward field methods in rhetorical scholarship by collecting distinct chapters based on the same object of study the University of Nevada Reno's Masterplan that extends the University into the adjacent community Exploring the perennial problem of university community relations from the perspective of multiple publics this book provides thick description of a local issue that resonates with communities across the country The fieldwork for each chapter was conducted in groups during a single week long site visit that asked scholars to study the asymmetrical traction among different communities to organize publicize and advocate positions around a proposed redevelopment project Surveying the results of this professional experiment the Project on Power Place and Publics each chapter offers a theoretical intervention into the same material site illustrates diverse place based field methods and models the scholarly results of work that mixes slow deliberate and thoughtful analysis with the fast pace and spontaneous demands of participatory research This volume is unique for a number of reasons it is the only study to concretely illustrate the compatibility of field methods with a wide range of theoretical perspectives it attests to the possibility of deeply collaborative research as teams of researchers engaged multiple local partners to produce these chapters and it challenges the pervasive intellectual terrain that pits one theory against another by showing how diverse scholarly approaches can bolster one another With a new introduction afterword and post script material from authors the other chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of Review of Communication
