History and Organization

The history of the American Society of Human Genetics (ASHG) is a story of the evolution of the field of human genetics. It began in 1889 with the founding of the American Society of Human Genetics (ASHG) by a group of scientists who were interested in the study of human heredity. The society was founded in the United States, and its members were primarily American scientists. The society's first meeting was held in 1889, and it was the first of many meetings that have since been held. The society's membership has grown steadily over the years, and it is now one of the largest and most influential organizations in the field of human genetics. The society's activities include the publication of the Journal of Human Genetics, the organization of conferences and workshops, and the promotion of research in human genetics. The society's history is a testament to the dedication and hard work of its members, and it is a source of pride for all who are involved in the study of human genetics.
