

SOCIAL LEARNING THEORY

Social learning theory explains how individuals acquire knowledge, attitudes, and behaviors through observation, imitation, and interaction with others.

OVERVIEW

Social learning theory emphasizes the role of observational learning in shaping human behavior. It posits that people learn not only through direct experience but also by observing and modeling the behavior of others. This theory suggests that individuals acquire new skills, attitudes, and values by imitating the actions of role models and by receiving reinforcement based on their observed behaviors.

EXAMPLE

Bonobo Doll Study: This study demonstrated social learning. In the study, children observed either an adult model behaving aggressively towards a doll or an adult engaging in non-aggressive behavior towards the doll. Children exposed to the aggressive model were more likely to imitate the aggressive behaviors with the doll, providing empirical support for SLT.

Regional Studies in the Global Age moves beyond facile generalizations based on the historical experience of modernization in the West by highlighting differences rather than similarities and contrasts rather than commonalities and by examining civilizational processes and culturally specific developmental patterns distinctive of different world regions. Essays combine comparative and historical sociology with civilizational analysis and the study of multiple and alternative modernities. Different patterns of modernization are compared within the framework of global local compressed communication and interaction that results from globalization. The introductory chapter puts the present effort in the context of the seminal work of three generations of comparative sociologists and what follows is a penetrating analysis of modernization and globality opening the way for rectifying the erasure of the historical experience of a very sizeable portion of humankind from the foundation of social theory.
