both the high costs paid by many men in disasters and the consequences of dominant masculinity practices for women and marginalized men. It concludes by examining how disaster risk can be reduced through men's diverse efforts to challenge hierarchies around gender, sexuality, disability, age, and culture.      Greening Social Work Education Susan

Hillock, 2024-03-01 Despite urgent calls for global action, sustainable social work practice and a solid green theoretical knowledge base in North American social work and helping professions have been slow to learn from community activists. Acknowledging the international climate emergency and acting collectively to achieve climate justice, Greening Social Work Education examines how social work educators can best incorporate sustainability content into social work curricula, integrate green teaching methods, and mobilize students and colleagues towards climate action, justice, and leadership. Drawing on Canadian content, this collection highlights Indigenous eco-feminist collective action and multi-interdisciplinary approaches to social work. The book provides a rationale for why the topic of greening is important for social work and the helping professions, discusses current debates, tensions, and issues, offers useful ideas related to innovative interdisciplinary theoretical approaches, analyses and constructs, and provides practical recommendations for teaching green social work education. In doing so, Greening Social Work Education strives to help social workers and educators gain the confidence and tools they need to transform their teaching and curricula.      Social Work in Extremis Michael Lavalette, Vasilios Ioakimidis, 2011 This important book looks at social work responses in different countries to extreme social, economic, and political situations, including war situations, military regimes, earthquakes, and tsunamis.      Lifespan Perspectives on Natural Disasters Katie E. Cherry, 2009-07-09 Some of our most disturbing images of Hurricane Katrina involve the very old trapped in flooded nursing homes and the very young, sick, in toxic trailers. An expert panel of behavioral scientists and first responders analyzes the psychological impact of natural disasters on coping faculties associated with children, adolescents, and young, middle-aged, older, young-old, and late-life/oldest-old adults. This timely information is invaluable both to mental health service providers and to those tasked with developing age-appropriate disaster preparedness, intervention, and recovery programs. In addition, the book references other deadly storms as well as other major catastrophic events, e.g., the September 11 attacks, the Indian Ocean Tsunami, and includes such topics as: Young children's understanding of hurricanes; Positive adjustment in youth after Katrina; How families make meaning out of disaster; Disaster recovery in the workplace; Recovery services for the frail elderly; Coping and health in late life; Preparation and training of mental health personnel for disasters; Unique in the disaster literature, Lifespan Perspectives on Natural Disasters serves as a research reference and idea book for professionals and graduate-level students in psychology, social work, and disaster preparedness and services.      Rebuilding Lives Post-disaster Julie Drolet, 2019 Social workers are increasingly engaged in supporting individuals and communities in long-term disaster recovery. Rebuilding Lives
