Internal Migration, Crime, and Punishment in Contemporary China Anqi Shen, 2018-11-15 This work investigates inequality and social exclusion in contemporary Chinese society specifically in the context of urbanization migration and crime Economic reforms started in the late 1970s post Mao fuelled a trend of urbanization and mass migration within China largely from rural areas to more economically developed urban regions. With this migration came new challenges in a rapidly changing society. Researchers have extensively studied the rural to urban human movement, social changes, inequality, and its impact on individuals and society as a whole. This volume provides a new perspective on this issue. It forges a link between internal migration, inequality, social exclusion, and crime in the context of China through qualitative research into the impact of this phenomenon on individuals' lives. Using a series of case studies drawn from interviews with inmates, men and women in a large Chinese prison, it focuses on migrant offenders' subjective experiences and analyses issues from the rarely heard perspectives of migrant lawbreakers themselves. The research demonstrates how factors including the hukou system, rural-urban class, and gender inequalities, prejudices against rural migrants, and other structural problems often lead to migrant offending. The author argues that to mitigate the effects of criminalisation, the root causes of these problems should be examined, emphasizing radical reforms to the hukou policy, cultural change in urban society to welcome newcomers, positive programs to integrate migrant workers into urban societies, and improve their opportunities rather than inflicting harsher penalties or reducing migration. While the research is based in China, it has clear implications for other regions of the world which are experiencing similar tensions related to national and international migration. This work will be of interest to researchers in criminology and criminal justice, particularly with an interest in Asia, as well as those in related fields such as sociology, law, and social justice.

An Introduction to Criminological Theory Roger Hopkins Burke, 2017-11-27

This book provides a comprehensive and up-to-date introduction to criminological theory for students taking courses in criminology at both undergraduate and postgraduate level. Building on previous editions which broadened the debate on criminological theory, this book presents the latest research and theoretical developments. The text is divided into five parts, the first three of which address ideal type models of criminal behaviour: the rational actor, predestined actor, and victimized actor models. Within these, the various criminological theories are located chronologically in the context of one of these different traditions, and the strengths and weaknesses of each theory and model are clearly identified. The fourth part of the book looks closely at more recent attempts to integrate theoretical elements from both within and across models of criminal behaviour, while the fifth part addresses a number of key recent concerns of criminology: postmodernism, cultural criminology, globalization, and communitarianism. All major theoretical perspectives are considered, including classical criminology, biological and psychological positivism, labelling theories, feminist criminology, critical criminology, and left realism, social control theories, the risk society. The new edition also features comprehensive coverage of recent developments in criminology, including situation action theory, desistance theory, peacemaking criminology, Loïc Wacquant's thesis of the penal society, critical race theory, and Southern theory. This revised and expanded fourth edition of An Introduction to Criminological Theory includes chapter summaries, critical thinking questions, a full glossary of terms and theories, and a timeline of criminological theory, making it essential reading for those studying criminology.
