Small Towns in Multilevel Society Frank Wilbur Young, 1999 Small Towns in Multilevel Society introduces an original non economic explanation of how small communities work and how their structure determines the well being of residents It then tests the main proposition using an inexpensive comparative technique to develop a sociological theory and methods package that can be applied anywhere in the world Frank W Young uses data from seventy six towns in five New York counties to test his main propositions as a reply to central place theory and class analysis The author explains that differentiation pluralism and solidarity interact with the mostly economic transaction organizations that do the daily work of the community to determine the average quality of life of the residents Young argues that economic theory takes a secondary role in this assessment His study sets high standards that allow for the systematic comparison of small communities and the correct identification of the multiple levels of structure creating a clear picture of the actual well being of residents in small communities

R. Thomas, 2012-02-01 In what may be the first explicitly comparative study of the effects of globalization on metropolitan and rural communities In Gotham's Shadow examines how three central New York communities struggled over the last half century to survive in a global economy that seems to have forgotten them Utica formerly a city of one hundred thousand experienced the same trends of suburbanization deindustrialization and urban renewal as nearly every American city with the same mixed results In Cooperstown and Hartwick two small villages forty miles south of Utica the same trends were at work though with different outcomes Hartwick may be seen as an example of how small towns have lost their core while Cooperstown may be seen as an example of how a small town can survive by transforming itself into a tourist destination Thomas provides extensive historical background mixed with newspaper excerpts and lively interviews that add a human dimension to the transformations these communities have experienced Measures of Progress for Collaboration Su Rolle, 2002
