Social Choice Re Examined:

Social Choice Re-Examined Kotaro Suzumura, 1997-03-15 Since World War II the subject of social choice has grown in many and surprising ways The impossibility theorems have suggested many directions mathematical characterisations of voting structures satisfying various sets of conditions the consequences of restricting choice to certain domains the relation to competitive equilibrium and the core and trade offs among the partial satisfactions of some conditions The links with classical and modern theories of justice and in particular the competing ideas of rights and utilitarianism have shown the power of formal social choice analysis in illuminating the most basic philosophical arguments about the good social life Finally the ideals of the just society meet with the play of self interest social choice mechanisms can lend themselves to manipulation and the analysis of conditions under which given ideals can be realised under self interest is a political parallel to the welfare economics of the market The contributors to these volumes focus on these issues at the forefront of current research

Inequality Reexamined Amartya Sen, 1995-03-15 The noted economist and philosopher Amartya Sen argues that the dictum all people are created equal serves largely to deflect attention from the fact that we differ in age gender talents and physical abilities as well as in material advantages and social background He argues for concentrating on higher and more basic values individual capabilities and freedom to achieve objectives By concentrating on the equity and efficiency of social arrangements in promoting freedoms and capabilities of individuals Sen adds an important new angle to arguments about such vital issues as gender inequalities welfare policies affirmative action and public provision of health care and education idea that a just society should equalize the resources that determine the opportunities agents face in order to follow their goals. Resources are either external like financial resources or internal like preferences or skills. The authors propose to define equality of opportunity as the combination of ethical principles of compensation and responsibility. The principle of compensation requires external resources to be used to compensate low skilled agents considering that inequalities due to skill differences are unjust. The principle of responsibility requires external resources to be allocated without regards to inequalities due to differences in preferences considering that these inequalities are not unjust. The articles present different ways of combining the two principles in different economic contexts. The book offers many possible aspects of the analysis of equality of opportunity ranging from axiomatic discussions in abstract compensation models to the design of redistribution policies in concrete labor income taxation models.

Shaping Entrepreneurship Research Saras Sarasvathy, Nicholas Dew, Sankaran Venkataraman, 2020-04-21. Shaping Entrepreneurship Research: Made as Well as Found is a collection of readings designed to support entrepreneurship research. Focused on a worldview in which the future is open ended and shapeable through human action, i.e. made, this collection reframes entrepreneurship as a science of the artificial rather than as a natural or social science. It posits an open ended universe for the making of human artifacts even if large swathes of nature and society are not within the control of the people making them. The book explores the notion of made through 25 foundational readings, classics from the history of ideas. Organized into five sections, each classic is individually introduced by the editors in one of five chapters written to explain its relevance and significance for a made view of entrepreneurship. Readers will benefit from exposure to these classic ideas and ongoing research in a variety of areas that fall somewhat outside the line of sight of traditional entrepreneurship research. Both individually and collectively, the readings suggest opportunities to ask new questions and develop new ways of framing entrepreneurship research that carry the discussion beyond worlds found to worlds made as well as found. The book is crafted to be valuable to three groups of scholars: young scholars with limited or no access to research infrastructure but with a desire to participate in deep conversations; young scholars with access to research infrastructure who also desire to listen in on a different kind of conversation; and established entrepreneurship scholars who are contemplating an alternative set of foundational ideas to support their conversations in the discipline.

Freedom in Economics Marc Fleurbaey, Nicolas Gravel, Jean-François Laslier, Alain Trannoy, 2002-01-22. This book presents a range of papers by philosophers and economists who consider the definition and value of liberty, freedom in rights and equality of opportunity. Until recently, freedom has played no explicit role in the conceptual framework of economists; however, freedom seems to be at the heart of economics. The book provides a substantial contribution to the fruitful dialogue between the philosophy and economics in this area. Each chapter is integrated, being followed by comments which explore the underlying debates. Contributors are French economists, philosophers and political scientists as well as authors from Belgium and the Netherlands.
