The Practices of Painting in Japan, 1475-1500 Quitman E. Phillips, 2000 This book attempts to expand the grounds and methodology of studying Japanese art history by focusing on the conditions procedures events and social interplay that characterized the production of paintings in late fifteenth century Japan Though the book's ultimate concerns are art historical its analysis also draws heavily from the insights of sociology and social history At its core is a fresh examination of the major primary documents of the period in an attempt to liberate the study from assumptions long embedded in the historiography of late medieval Japanese painting history Early chapters describe documents methods basic sites and conditions of painting before turning to the main contribution of the book painting considered as a body of social practices The production of painting in the late fifteenth century was profoundly social dynamically related to the circumstances of its agents Painters advisors assistants clients and others did not exert themselves simply to bring paintings into existence They sought advantages such as wealth and prestige met obligations and satisfied the demands of custom Surviving documents from the period present rich evidence of the involvement of such persons in the imperial court the Ashikaya Gozan community the great temples of Nara and the halls of local lords The author takes into account the patterns of expectation that existed at the various sites but does not construe them as static and mechanically determined Rather he shows that expectations evolved in response to changed conditions Although this study specifically addresses the last quarter of the fifteenth century it can aid future research in Japanese painting practice in other eras by serving as a model of how new interpretations can emerge from close documentary investigation

A Poetics of Courtly Male Friendship in Heian Japan Paul Gordon Schalow, 2006-12-31 Western scholars have tended to read Heian literature through the prism of female experience stressing the imbalance of power in courtship and looking for evidence that women hoped to move beyond the constraints of marriage politics Paul Schalow's original and challenging work inherits these concerns about the transcendence of love and carries them into a new realm of inquiry the suffering of noblemen and the literary record of their hopes for transcendence through friendship He traces this recurring theme which he labels courtly male friendship in five important literary works ranging from the tenth century Tale of Ise to the early eleventh century Tale of Genji Whether authored by men or women the depictions of male friendship addressed in this work convey the differing perspectives of male and female authors profoundly shaped by their gender roles in the court aristocracy Schalow's analysis clarifies in particular how Heian literature articulates the nobleman's wish to be known and appreciated fully by another man
