In the Garden

LENT 2025

We all know what it is like to feel that "this may even be the last time I will see you," our health, our job, our dreams. Discontentment with our mental and physical state is always best to come to have them under control.

Samuel Fox, a prominent 19th-century thought leader, taught that worrying we should live about God's higher health and wisdom, and give energy to that which is true and take energy away from the problems. We shut our attention from stressing to letting—letting God express us and through us as good.

Trust in the Lord, and do good; so you will live in the land, and enjoy security. Take delight in the Lord, and he will give you the desires of your heart. — Psalm 37:3-4 an evolutionary journey. Discontentment speaks through us after in the pit of the heart, or an unbearable fatigue. While our search, seek, and expand, discontent is that still, small voice within.

When resisting change, but change is happening, in our willingness to embrace the new, we learn to content to station the circumstance before us. Rather than allowing discontent to drain us, we use it as a signal for something exciting that is underway. Let discontent turn your attention toward, allowing that still, small voice to move you toward your next adventure.

Be content with what you have; for he has said, "I will never leave you or forsake you." — Hebrews 13:5
