Hudson, 2017-09-18 Excerpt from Tales of the Pampas They say that sorrow and at last ruin comes upon the house on whose roof the shadow of the ombu tree falls and on that house which now is not the shadow of this tree came every summer day when the sun was low They say too that those who sit much in the ombu shade become crazed Perhaps sir the bone of my skull is thicker than in most men since I have been accustomed to sit here all my life and though now an old man I have not yet lost my reason It is true that evil fortune came to the old house in the end but into every door sorrow must enter sorrow and death that comes to all men and every house must fall at last About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Tales of the Pampas W.
