Talking About Literacy Principles And Practices Of Adult Literacy Education:

Talking About Literacy Jane Mace, 2003-08-29 Talking about Literacy re examines dominant notions of what literacy is and challenges the problem solution reflex to the issue the problem is illiteracy the solution is more literacy Literacy has enormous emotional and political associations and the job of literacy educator often concerns changing attitudes and challenging prejudices whether in the form of publicity strategies counselling new students or in curriculum design In short adult literacy education means not only teaching courses like fresh start basic skills study skills communication skills language support and return to study but also designing strategies to encourage people to see that these courses may meet their own interests and educating them and others to rethink their own negative attitudes to illiteracy The book looks in detail in at five principles put forward by Jane Mace as central to the education of people who often can read but wish they could read better who technically can write but have a desire to do so with more expression and coherence These principles focus on five themes context inquiry authorship equality and community Since it is all too easy for literacy education involving adults who do not have formal qualifications to stop short of teaching techniques for correct writing these principles mean taking seriously a view that adult students are writers as well as readers that they have an entitlement to be read as well as to read others

Student Writing Theresa M. Lillis, 2002-01-04 Student Writing presents an accessible and thought provoking study of academic writing practices Informed by composition research from the US and academic literacies studies from the UK the book challenges current official discourse on writing as a skill Lillis argues for an approach which sees student writing as social practice The book draws extensively on a three year study with ten non traditional students in higher education and their experience of academic writing Using case study material including literacy history interviews extended discussions with students about their writing of discipline specific essays and extracts from essays Lillis identifies the following as three significant dimensions to academic writing Access to higher education and to its language and literacy representational resources Regulation of meaning making in academic writing Desire for participation in higher education and for choices over ways of meaning in academic writing Student Writing access regulation desire raises questions about why academics write as they do who benefits from such writing which meanings are valued and how on what terms outsiders get to be insiders and at what costs

Working with Experience David Boud, Nod Miller, 1996 Everyday we are confronted with problems and challenges which we address by drawing on our experience and by using this experience to find ways of learning what to do in new circumstances Learning through experience is the normal commonplace approach to learning and we take it for granted Whilst much is known about teaching and being taught far less attention has been given to learning in context in particular to learning outside the classroom Yet this is in fact where most learning takes place One especially neglected area is the role which people other than the learner play in facilitating learning This role is undertaken not only by teachers trainers parents and counsellors but also by managers supervisors care givers and friends This book brings together the experiences of a number of practitioners who write from often strongly contrasting perspectives these include feminism Marxism critical pedagogy post modernism and Gestalt humanistic clinical and transpersonal psychology The authors also come from a wide range of international backgrounds including adult higher and teacher education community work organisational development and psychotherapy Each chapter is grounded not only in professional practice and in theory but also in personal experience Overall then the book provides fascinating insights into what some good practitioners do to promote learning and how they make sense of this David Boud is professor in the School of Adult Education University of Technology Sydney Nod Miller is Professor in the Department of Innovation Studies University of East London
