Karl,Peter Zarrow,2020-03-23 The nine essays in this volume reexamine the hundred days in 1898 and focus particularly on the aftermath of this reform movement Their collective goal is to rethink the reforms not as a failed attempt at modernizing China but as a period in which many of the institutions that have since structured China began Among the subjects covered are the reform movement the reformers newspapers education the urban environment female literacy the new woman citizenship and literature All the contributors urge the view that modernity must be seen as a conceptual framework that shaped the Chinese experience of a global process an experience through which new problems were raised and old problems rethought in creative inventive and contradictory ways Redefining Rape Estelle B. Redefining the Political Novel Sharon M. Harris, 1995 While critical studies of the American political novel date from the 1920s such considerations of the genre have failed whether wittingly or unwittingly to recognize works by women The exclusion is usually based on a distinction between social novels and political novels and the result is an understanding of the political as a largely male province In this thought provoking collection of essays the contributors seek not simply to add works by women to the canon of political novels but rather to demand a conceptual revolution one that questions the very precepts on which the canon is based This redefinition of the political novel takes many factors into account including gender race and class and their relation to our most basic conceptions of literary and aesthetic value
