Thomas Henry Huxley, 2013-12 There are three ways of regarding any account of past occurrences whether delivered to us orally or recorded in writing The narrative may be exactly true That is to say the words taken in their natural sense and interpreted according to the rules of grammar may convey to the mind of the hearer or of the reader an idea precisely correspondent with one which would have remained in the mind of a witness For example the statement that King Charles the First was beheaded at Whitehall on the 30th day of January 1649 is as exactly true as any proposition in mathematics or physics no one doubts that any person of sound faculties properly placed who was present at Whitehall throughout that day and who used his eyes would have seen the King s head cut off and that there would have remained in his mind an idea of that occurrence which he would have put into words of the same value as those which we use to express it Science & Education
