History of Psychology in Autobiography Leendert P.

Mos, 2009-06-12 Since the 17th century autobiography has an honorable place in the study of history. In 1930 the preeminent historian of psychology Edwin Boring writes that a science separated from its history lacks direction and promises a future of uncertain importance. To understand what psychology is and what it is becoming the autobiographies of famous psychologists is history at its best. Here we find model inquirers of the science who offer a personalized account of themselves and their vocation in the context of the history of the science. What is characteristic of many of those who have contributed to an alternate vision of psychological science is that they never considered themselves or were considered by others as belonging to the mainstream of the discipline. In considering an alternative history of psychology in autobiography the editor invited contributors whose research and writings have pushed the discipline in other directions, pushed its limits, and whose scholarship finds its philosophical framework outside the discipline altogether. If these contributors may not be model inquirers, their scholarship is very much a matter of consequence for those who wish to understand psychology. Among the outliers included here are those who devoted themselves to the writing of psychology, examining its history, theories, research, and professional practices, and who enthusiastically embraced over the course of their lives the discipline as a human science. Their influence has been subtle, as has been their appeal to many students who affection for the discipline finds its promise in a discerning self-awareness and a critical understanding of others and their worlds. This volume is not simply a collection of personal chronologies which might inspire or lend appreciation to a younger generation. Our contributors write from their personal and professional experience of course, but they write of their thinking and understanding of the psyche as an aspect of human life, of psychology as an academic form of human sciences inquiry, and so bring to bear their scientific and philosophical imagination to their personal challenges in their chosen vocation as psychologists. Our contributors cover a broad swath of the second half of the 20th century, the century of psychology. Nurturing the discipline from within, various philosophical, social, political, and cultural roots, their autobiographies exemplify marginality, if not alienation from the mainstream, even as their professional and personal lives give expression to engaged scholarship, commitment to vocation, and straightforwardly and reflectively, a love of the heart. From Germany, Carl Graumann; from France, Erika Apfelbaum; from Canada, David Bakan; and from the United States, Amedeo Giorgi, Robert Rieber, and Joseph Rychlak relate their lives to the larger contexts of our times. Their personal stories are an integral part of the historiography of our discipline. Indeed, a contribution to the historiography of our discipline is constituted in their autobiographical self-presentations; for their writings attest as much to their lives as model inquirers as they do to the possibility of psychology as a human science. A History of Psychology in Autobiography Gardner Lindzey, William McKinley Runyan, 2007. This book is an attempt to examine the history of psychology through autobiographies of some of the science's early theorists. The author of a recent history of psychology found that it was impossible to get important facts concerning the scientific development of certain individuals except from those individuals themselves Since a science separated from its history lacks direction and promises a future of uncertain importance it is a matter of consequence to those who wish to understand psychology for those individuals who have greatly influenced contemporary psychology to put into print as much of their personal histories as bears on their professional careers PsycINFO Database Record c 2006 APA all rights reserved A History of Modern Psychology Per Saugstad,2018-11-08 This textbook presents an engaging and global history of psychological science from the birth of the field to the present A History of Modern Psychology David C. try to bring them back to this field by drawing on new insights and latest developments in psychological theory

Positivism in Psychology Charles W. Tolman, 2012-12-06 Positivism needs further scrutiny In recent years there has been little consensus about the nature of positivism or about the precise forms its influence has taken on psychological theory One symptom of this lack of clarity has been that ostensibly anti positivist psychological theorizing is frequently found reproducing one or more distinctively positivist assumptions The contributors to this volume believe that while virtually every theoretically engaged psychologist today openly rejects positivism in both its 19th century and 20th century forms it is indispensable to look at positivism from all sides and to appraise its role and importance in order to make possible the further development of psychological theory A History of Women in Psychology and Neuroscience Dale DeBakcsy, 2024-09-30 Since virtually its first moments as an academic science women have played a major role in the development of psychology gaining from the outset research opportunities and academic positions that had been denied them for centuries in other branches of scientific investigation Look wherever you will in any branch of psychology or neuroscience in the last century and a half and what you will find are a plethora of women whose discoveries fundamentally changed how we view the brain and its role in the formation of our perceptions and behaviors A History of Women in Psychology and Neuroscience tells the story of 267 women whose work opened new doors in humanity's ongoing attempt to learn about its own nature from Christine Ladd Franklin's late 19th century studies of how the brain perceives color to Virginia Johnson's pioneering studies of the human sexual response and Augusta Dejerine Klumpke's early association of neurological conditions with their underlying brain regions to May Britt Moser's Nobel winning discovery a century later of the grid cells that allow us to mentally model our surroundings Here are the stories of when and how we learned how memories are formed what role an enriched environment plays in mental development why some individuals are better able to cope with chronic stress than others how societal stereotypes unconsciously feed into our daily interactions with other people what role evolution might have played in the formation of our social habits what light the practices of sign language might shed on our brain's basic capacity for language how children internalize the violence they experience from others and hundreds of other tales of the women who dug deep into the structures of the human mind to uncover layer by layer the answers to millennia old questions of what humans are and why they behave as they do Psychologists on the March James H.
