Bhalerao, 2012-11 This book centers around the study of neutron stars especially those in massive binary systems To this end it has two distinct components the observational study of neutron stars in massive binaries with a goal of measuring neutron star masses and participation in NuSTAR the first imaging hard X ray mission one that is extremely well suited to the study of massive binaries and compact objects in our Galaxy The Nuclear Spectroscopic Telescope Array NuSTAR is a NASA Small Explorer mission that will carry the first focusing high energy X ray telescope to orbit NuSTAR has an order of magnitude better angular resolution and has two orders of magnitude higher sensitivity than any currently orbiting hard X ray telescope I worked to develop calibrate and test CdZnTe detectors for NuSTAR I describe the CdZnTe detectors in comprehensive detail here from readout procedures to data analysis Detailed calibration of detectors is necessary for analyzing astrophysical source data obtained by the NuSTAR I discuss the design and implementation of an automated setup for calibrating flight detectors followed by calibration procedures and results Neutron stars are an excellent probe of fundamental physics The maximum mass of a neutron star can put stringent constraints on the equation of state of matter at extreme pressures and densities From an astrophysical perspective there are several open questions in our understanding of neutron stars What are the birth masses of neutron stars How do they change in binary evolution Are there multiple mechanisms for the formation of neutron stars Measuring masses of neutron stars helps answer these questions Neutron stars in high mass X ray binaries have masses close to their birth mass providing an opportunity to disentangle the role of nature and nurture in the observed mass distributions In 2006 masses had been measured for only six such objects but this small sample showed the greatest diversity in masses among all classes of neutron star binaries Intrigued by this diversity which points to diverse birth masses we undertook a systematic survey to measure the masses of neutron stars in nine high mass X ray binaries In this book I present results from this ongoing project Fiber Optic Star Ceilings DIYMovieRooms.com, 2015-01-02 Follow my journey of adding a star field to my home theater I ll discuss the techniques and walk you through my project from start to finish

A Statistical and Multi-wavelength Study of Star Formation in Galaxies Corentin Schreiber,2016-09-12 This thesis presents a pioneering method for gleaning the maximum information from the deepest images of the far infrared universe obtained with the Herschel satellite reaching galaxies fainter by an order of magnitude than in previous studies Using these high quality measurements the author first demonstrates that the vast majority of galaxy star formation did not take place in merger driven starbursts over 90% of the history of the universe which suggests that galaxy growth is instead dominated by a steady infall of matter The author further demonstrates that massive galaxies suffer a gradual decline in their star formation activity providing an alternative path for galaxies to stop star formation One of the key unsolved questions in astrophysics is how galaxies acquired their mass in the course of cosmic time In the standard theory the merging of galaxies plays a major role in forming new stars Then old galaxies abruptly stop forming stars through an unknown process Investigating this theory requires an unbiased measure of the star formation intensity of galaxies which has been unavailable due to the dust obscuration of stellar light
