Inventions That Built the Information Technology Revolution Rhys McCarney, 2018-03-08

In 1975 there were a couple thousand physicists doing research in the areas of optics and semiconductor devices A handful of scientists created a few inventions that formed the hardware platform for computers mobile devices the internet and broadband communication They received plaques acknowledging the brilliance of their work Today computer internet and social media software which wouldn't exist without the platform is king Five high tech corporations make up 12% of the US market capitalization of public companies Many titans have wealth of 10 to 100B How did so many derive so much wealth from the inventions of so few who received so little a sweeping and deeply intelligent look at the history of an industry that has done more to shape the modern world than any other Foreword Clarion Reviews exactly argued and refreshingly original A painstaking account of the intersection of money law and creativity Kirkus Reviews

An Economic Study of the Information Technology Revolution (Classic Reprint) Charles Jonscher, 2017-01-24

Excerpt from An Economic Study of the Information Technology Revolution Integration As the automated office functions and automated physical production systems within firms become integrated and networked there is a reversal in the trend to separate out the information management tasks from the remainder of the economy Information systems link customers to suppliers and offices to factories In the consequent reintegration of economic activity information technology plays a more central role in the strategy of businesses and the performance of the economy It is a popular conception that the primary driving force behind this information revolution has been progress in microelectronic technology and more particularly in the development of integrated circuits or chips On this view the reason why computing power which used to fill a room and cost now stands on a desk and costs 5000 or why pocket calculators which used to cost 1000 now cost 10 is that society happens to have benefitted from a series of spectacularly successful inventions in the field of electronics As to why the introduction of information technology occurred when it did or took the path that it did why data processing came before word processing or why computers transformed the office environment before they transformed the factory environment the popular conception is silent And since this technology oriented view of the causes behind the information revolution offers little guidance as to the direction which technological developments have taken thus far it offers little insight into the direction which they will take in the future About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

The Information Technology Revolution and Economic Development Nagy Hanna, 1991 Information is a major development resource joining the ranks with human natural and financial resources Therefore development agencies must understand the role of information and information technologies informatics in the developing countries to respond to a rapidly evolving global environment The ongoing information explosion in the industrialized economies contrasts sharply with the information poverty of developing countries This poverty takes many forms including poor information support for macroeconomic and sectoral policy formulation and implementation limited access to information for rural populations and isolation of researchers and professionals from international research findings and so on Informatics applications offers new ways to make the most of the managerial and institutional resources of developing countries with the most widespread benefits likely to come from applying it to priority sectors Governments are recognizing their roles as information providers and users facilitators of information technology diffusion and providers of information and communication infrastructures as well as their role in setting policies for informatics During the 1990s the impact of information technology will be felt increasingly Developing countries at all levels of development must stay abreast of the information revolution they cannot afford to ignore this second industrial revolution
