New Life Courses, Social Risks and Social Policy in East Asia Raymond K. H. Chan, Jens Zinn, Lih-Rong Wang, 2015-10-30 Social policy in modern industrialised societies is increasingly challenged by new social risks These include insecure employment resulting from ever more volatile labour markets new family and gender relationships resulting from the growing participation of women in the labour market and the many problems resulting from very much longer human life expectancy Whereas once social policy had to be in step with a standardised relatively stable and predictable life course it now has to cope with non standardised individual preferences life courses and families and the consequent increased risks and uncertainties This book examines these new life courses and their impact on social policy across a range of East Asian societies It shows how governments and social welfare institutions have been slow to respond to the new challenges In response we propose a life course sensitised policy as an approach to manage these risks Overall the book provides many new insights which will assist advance social policy in East Asia

Changing Governance and Public Policy in East Asia

Ka Ho Mok, Ray Forrest, 2008-11-24 The search for good governance has become an increasingly important element of public policy and public management and is high on the political agenda of East Asian countries The need for robust governance structures and institutions was brought into sharp focus by the Asian Financial Crisis which adversely affected most East Asian societies Since then they have begun to look for ways to restructure their public administration and political systems in order to develop new mechanisms and structures to promote good governance This book focuses on how selected Asian states have responded to the growing impact of liberalizing and marketizing trends in public policy formulation and public management To what extent is the state guided regime in Asia still relevant to governing public policy public management What are the policy implications for a growing number of Asian states which are pursuing more pro competition policy instruments The book is a timely and important collection that offers critical analysis of the search for new governance in Asia and compares and contrasts experiences in selected Asian societies such as China Japan Hong Kong Taiwan South Korea Singapore and other parts of South East Asia Chapters are written by leading scholars in the fields of comparative development policy and governance studies from Hong Kong Macau Taiwan China Singapore Japan and the United Kingdom

Ramesh, Azad S. Bali, 2021-12-09 The book assesses the policy actions of select Asian governments China India Hong Kong South Korea Singapore and Thailand to address critical health system functions from a policy design perspective The findings show that all governments in the region have made tremendous strides in focussing their attention on the core issues and especially the interactions among them However there is still insufficient appreciation of the usefulness of public hospitals and their efficient management Similarly some governments have not made sufficient efforts to establish an effective regulatory framework which is especially vital in systems with a large share of private providers and payers A well run public hospital system and an effective framework for regulating private providers are essential tools to support the governance financing and payment reforms underway in the six health systems studied in this book Social Welfare in East Asia and the
