US Military Innovation Since the Cold War Harvey Sapolsky, Benjamin Friedman, Brendan Green, 2009-04-28 This book explains how the US military reacted to the Revolution in Military Affairs RMA and failed to innovate its organization or doctrine to match the technological breakthroughs it brought about Many called for the transformation of the US military in the years after the end of the Cold War seeking the changes in organization and doctrine that would complete the RMA innovation and a commitment to counter insurgency peace keeping and nation building missions This volume describes the origins uses and limits of the RMA technologies examines how each of the five US armed services categorising the Special Operations as a separate service made their adjustments both to the technologies and the use of force and how the role of the civilian officials and the defense industry altered in this process of change and avoidance of change The book examines the internal politics of the services as well as civil military relations to identify the external pressures on the services for significant change in their doctrine and weapons Many have noted the failure of the services to innovate in what can be called the Second Inter war Period the years after the Cold War This book offers explanations for this failure and arguments about the possible range and desirability of military innovation in the post Cold war era This book will be of great interest to students of strategic studies US defence politics military studies and US politics Harvey M Sapolsky is Professor of Public Policy and Organization in the Department of Political Science at MIT and former Director of the Security Studies Program Benjamin H Friedman is a Research Fellow in Defense and Homeland Security Studies at the Cato Institute and a Ph D Candidate in Political Science at MIT Brendan Green is a Ph D Candidate in Political Science at MIT and an affiliate of the Security Studies Program

India and Central Asia in the Post-Cold War Era Saroj Kumar Aryal,2024-11-29 This book analyses the evolution of India s foreign policy towards Central Asia after the end of the Cold War Focusing on the development of India s foreign policy towards Central Asia between 1991 and 2020 this book investigates the explanatory and intervening variables of the policy towards the region to identify its goals assumptions motivations and instruments The preliminary assumption is that India s foreign policy towards Central Asia has evolved after the Cold War from a passive approach to an active participant in Central Asian security economic and socio cultural spheres This is also seen due to the emergence of the five Central Asian countries as independent states which have a tremendous strategic significance due to their geographical location huge hydrocarbon reserve and potential economic opportunities India expanded its policy to the Extended Neighbourhood adding East Central and West Asia to the existing South Asian neighbourhood Since then India has been engaging with the region considering the growing geostrategic and geo economic significance of the region and using the available foreign policy instruments This book presents a comprehensive assessment of India s foreign policy behaviour evolution with proper analysis of the explanatory external and intervening internal variables that influence India s behaviours towards the region It shows that India also aims to be a very influential power in Central Asia This book will be an excellent resource for students and researchers of area and global studies international relations Asian Politics and South and Central Asia The Open Access version of this book available at <http://www.taylorfrancis.com> has been made available under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives CC BY NC ND 4 0 license

The Price of Peace William H. Gregory,1993 Groups to meet the economic demands of peace However old Cold War roles must be reversed While government once put up money and dictated defense industrial policy it must now allow industry and market demand to lead the way But he adds the government must also encourage new industrial technology and new dual military and civilian technologies by opening its own research laboratories to commercial research and collapsing the barriers between research

The Economics of Defense Industry Thomas-Durell Young,2023-10-17 This book on the economics of defence industry assesses a series of historical and contemporary case studies that consistently demonstrate the need for governments to recognise and thereafter factor the financial needs of a narrow industrial sector that is capital intensive technologically advanced and that requires a highly skilled labour force Since the end of the cold war Western governments have systematically reduced financial support to their domestic defence industry and have seemingly ignored planning and funding industrial mobilisation In all cases government policy has been to encourage industries to consolidate capacity to become financially viable in a sector that has seen diminished demand The 2022 Russian invasion of Ukraine has caused Western governments to reassess their previous assumptions Efforts to increase industrial capacity have been met with the iron laws of economics whereby businesses need to show return on investments The chapters in this volume posit that efforts to rationalise industrial capacity and innovation to meet short term financial efficiencies inevitably results in limited expensive and long delays in increased production in times of international crisis This book serves as an essential guide for academics researchers and students interested in defence economics industrial economics international relations and industrial policy The chapters in this book were originally published in various issues of Defense Security Analysis From Defense to Development? Sean M. DiGiovanna,Ann Markusen,2003-09-11 This book tracks the progress of 12 countries on five continents in moving resources from defense to civilian activity in the 1990s Based on intensive research it addresses each country with an impressive standard of scholarship
