Support For Families Helping Children With Learning Difficulties:

Support for Families Peter Burke, Katy Cigno, 1996 Despite many studies of families where there is a child with a learning disability it is clear that such children do not from the beginning of their life enjoy the same opportunities as others inequality is also experienced by their carers almost always parents in their day to day lives This study through the views of carers considers the formal and informal networks used by families The book is in two parts Part one reviews the literature and introduces the research Part two gives basic qualitative and quantitative information about the subjects of the study includes detailed case studies and examines the kind of support received This provides a picture of the resources families use and helps identify gaps in the support that is available The book concludes with the arguments for a holistic approach to services for families and looks at what remains to be done to meet their needs

Supporting Children with Learning Difficulties Christine Turner, 2011-08-11 How do you teach history to a child who can't remember what she had for dinner What difference will it make to a child's counting skills if you place the objects in a line rather than dropped randomly on the table Will breaking down a task into smaller steps help a young person learn how to dress himself Children with learning disabilities do not follow set patterns of learning and yet often they are expected to learn in the same way as their non-disabled peers Christine Turner draws on 25 years experience gained from teaching children with severe profound and multiple disabilities to provide an introduction to learning disabilities and the effect they have on the individual and the family She proposes holistic strategies to ensure that every child makes progress regardless of the extent of their disability All aspects of learning from the simplest forms of non verbal communication to the way ICT can motivate and inspire are explored in this practical and informal guide for anyone wanting to support a child with learning difficulties
