Supporting Young People in Europe: Lessons from the 'second seven' Council of Europe international reviews of national youth policy Howard Williamson, 2002-01-01 This monograph has two purposes The first is to develop the framework that was initially established through a grounded reading of the material from the first seven international reviews of national youth policy conducted by the Council of Europe Youth Directorate between 1997 and 2001. This has involved a careful reading of the subsequent national and international reports produced between 2002 and 2006 to identify either issues that merit greater prominence or new issues to be addressed in the future. The outcome of this exercise is the proposal of a new framework for European level debates on the subject of youth policy. The second purpose is through consultation with those who took part in the second cycle of reviews to refine further the process by which international reviews are carried out. A number of observations suggest that immediate action can be taken to improve the experience of participating in review teams and ultimately the quality of the international reports.
