University of Indonesia | Faculty of Philosophy and Theology

1. Biography

Born October 15, 1844 in Rocken Germany, he was the son of a Lutheran minister. His father died when he was a child due to bleeding in the brain. Later Nietzsche lived with his mother and daughter's family. As a child he was educated by his family to become a priest like his father, but did not last long because he did not like him. Initially he entered Schulpforta where he studied Philology: related to the Humanities, Theology and classical languages, but did not last long.

In 1864 he moved to the university of Bonn and took up the study of Philology. And because of his genius in studying classical texts he was promoted to the youngest professor at the age of 24 in 1869. But in 1870 he joined the war between France and Prussia (Germany) as a doctor but not for long, this is because he suffering from dysentery, diphtheria and possibly syphilis. He briefly returned to teaching at the university but due to his deteriorating health he stopped teaching and lived his life alone with his older sister who took care of him until finally in 1900 Nietzsche died.

2. Friedrich Nietzsche's Thoughts

Pioneer of Aphorism as a Philosophical Style

Throughout his book we will find a very unique writing style where he uses aphorisms as a way of conveying the content of his thoughts into a text. This is interesting and unique as well as difficult for readers to understand. He revealed that the use of aphorisms itself is intended to make the intentions He wants to convey covert and layered. The aphorism used by Nietzsche is also a form of his dislike of the education system which likes to systematize everything, including the form of writing in a book. As we know that in a book writing system, normally we will use premises that will indirectly lead us to the ideology behind it, such as rationalism, where the logic of a text will be seen from the basis of the assumptions made. It seems that Nietzsche absolutely refuses to be led into this position of thinking. According to him, the premises (assumptions) must be translated or interpreted by the reader himself because then the reader will not be led by the rationalism contained in a text.

This aphorism used by Nietzsche can be regarded as the starting point for Derrida's deconstruction in understanding the text. For Nietzsche words have no value or metaphysics behind them so that the reader's interpretation will be wider in understanding the text. In addition, readers will avoid fanaticism towards a text, imagine if a text already has an absolute meaning or meaning then the text will not be able to develop again because the meaning has been absolute by the author.

Criticism of Dialectic

Nietzsche openly opposed the dialectical method taught by Socrates and his students such as Aristotle. He considered them to be the true moral destroyers of ancient Greece. According to him, dialectics will lead one's thinking indirectly to syllogistics. Nietzsche also considers that dialectics based on absolute premises and assumptions like this will close the space for critical thinking. According to him, dialectics which always absolutes premises indirectly does not open itself to different conclusions. What's worse, Nietzsche saw that many people were angry when

This book studies the close relationship between Thus Spoke Zarathustra and the unfinished four volume Revaluation of All

Spoke Zarathustra but he considered publishing the fourth part which had not yet been published as a bridge between Zarathustra and the unfinished Revaluation of All Values More importantly during his last years he worked hard on revaluing values often in line with what he had written in Thus Spoke Zarathustra This present study performs detailed analyses of Nietzsche's texts and late notes to examine the direction of that unfinished work it will function as a stimulus to further
