and 70s gave rise to both militant political groups ranging from urban guerrilla groups to autonomist counterculture as well as radical media including radio music film video and television This book is concerned with both of those tendencies considered as bifurcations of radical media ecologies in the 1970s While some of the forms of media creativity and invention mapped here such as militant film and video pirate radio and guerrilla television fit within conventional definitions of media others such as urban guerrilla groups and autonomous movements do not Nevertheless what was at stake in all these ventures was the use of available means of expression in order to produce transformative effects and they were all in different ways responding to ideas and practices of guerrilla struggle and specifically of guerrilla media This book examines these radical media ecologies as guerrilla networks emphasising the proximity and inseparability of radical media and political practices

Motivations for Refusal Mark Gawne, 2025-05-01 In Motivations for Refusal Work Value and the Limits of Postworkerism Mark Gawne develops a critical account of how the affective politics of capital and class are formed and contested in contemporary arrangements of work and offers a comprehensive critique of the postworkerist school of autonomist Marxism Drawing on value critique and class composition analysis the book challenges core assumptions of postworkerism and related theories of affective labour while retaining their core insights Moving beyond the limits of postworkerism Gawne analyses how the integration of the affective sciences into management and workplace technologies constitutes a terrain of contestation in conditions of immaterial production Motivations for Refusal explores how affective politics emerge in the contestation between labour and capital in their affective modes
