The Philosophers Daughter:

The Philosopher's Daughter Susan Ertz, 1976 The Philosopher's Daughter, a Memoir Jennifer Stace, 2014-01-02
Jennifer was not an academic like her philosopher father. She danced and sang and painted and spent her college years at jazz clubs. Her father had been a rebel in his youth, a poet at the end of a long line of military men. He fell in love with words and reason. Jennifer fell in love with theater and dance. In Hollywood she taught stars like Cher and worked as a team with her son Michael, a gifted piano man and recording artist. Suddenly life took a devastating turn: choices were made, Jennifer witnessed and recorded her son's year behind bars awaiting trial for attempted murder. During the weeks before his death she began to write this memoir. Today she lives atop a hill overlooking the Pacific with horses, dogs, cats, chickens, and a big red rooster who crows all night long. Her life is full of surprises, peaceful and extraordinary.

Gender and Scientific Discourse in Early Modern Culture Kathleen P. Long, 2016-04-15
In the wake of new interest in alchemy as more significant than a bizarre aberration in rational Western European culture, this collection examines both alchemical and medical discourses in the larger context of early modern Europe. How do early scientific discourses infiltrate other cultural domains such as literature, philosophy, court life, and the conduct of households? How do these new contexts deflect scientific pursuits into new directions and allow a larger participation in the elaboration of scientific methods and perspectives? Might there have been a scientific subculture particularly surrounding alchemy which allowed women to participate in scientific pursuits long before they were admitted in an investigative capacity into official academic settings? This volume poses those questions as a starting point for a broader discussion of scientific subcultures and their relationship to the restructuring and questioning of gender roles.

The Daughter's Way Tanis MacDonald, 2012-09-01
The Daughter's Way investigates negotiations of female subjectivity in twentieth-century Canadian women's elegies with a special emphasis on the father's death as a literary and political watershed. The book examines the work of Dorothy Livesay, P. K. Page, Jay Macpherson, Margaret Atwood, Kristjana Gunnars, Lola Lemire Tostevin, Anne Carson, and Erin Mour as elegiac daughteronomies, literary artifacts of mourning that grow from the poet's investigation into the function and limitations of elegiac convention. Some poets treat the father as a metaphor for socio-political power, while others explore more personal iterations of loss, but all the poets in The Daughter's Way seek to redefine daughterly duty in a contemporary context by challenging elegiac tradition through questions of genre and gender. Beginning with psychoanalytical theories of filiation, inheritance, and mourning as they are complicated by feminist challenges to theories of kinship and citizenship, The Daughter's Way debates the efficacy of the literary work of mourning in twentieth-century Canadian poetry. By investigating the way a daughter's filial piety performs and sometimes reconfigures such work and situating melancholia as a creative force in women's elegies, the book considers how elegies inquire into the rhetoric of mourning as it is complicated by father-daughter kinship.

Daughters of Hecate Kimberly B. Stratton, Dayna S. Kalleres, 2014-10-01
