The Political Economy Of Javas Northeast Coast C 17401800:

The Political Economy of Java's Northeast Coast, c. 1740-1800 Hui Kian Kwee, 2005-12-01 This book is a study of the political economy of Java's Northeast Coast from 1743 when the VOC emerged as its ruler until the end of the eighteenth century. The focus is on the various power holders namely coastal Javanese regents, Mataram rulers, Chinese merchants and Company authorities and how they accommodated the changes brought about with the power shift, what their primary resources were and how they tried to maximize their advantages in the new politico-economic setting. This study also shows how the Company, despite being the ruler, had to compromise with these power holders and satisfy their needs to optimize its own gains.

Commodities, Ports and Asian Maritime Trade Since 1750 Anthony Webster, Ulbe Bosma, 2015-10-13 This book examines the role of mercantile networks in linking Asian economies to the global economy. It contains fourteen contributions on East Southeast and South Asia covering the period from 1750 to the present.

Sugar, Steam and Steel G. Roger Knight, 2014 Sugar Steam and Steel is about cane sugar and the transformation of an Indonesian island into the Oriental Cuba during the middle decades of the nineteenth century. Between the 1830s and the 1880s, sweetener manufacture in Dutch-controlled Java, the crown jewel of the erstwhile Netherlands Indies, drew decisively away in matters of technology and sugar science from other Asian centres of production which had once equaled or more often surpassed it in terms of both output and know-how. Along with its larger and altogether more famous Caribbean counterpart, Java's industry came to occupy a position at the apex of the trade in what had become by this date a key global commodity. Along with the beet sugar producers of post-1870 Imperial Germany, Cuba and Java accounted for a little over one third of the world's recorded output of the industrially manufactured kind of sugar usually referred to as centrifugal. While Cuba held the position of the world's largest supplier of cane sugar to international commodity markets, Dutch Java emerged from almost nowhere to take second place. The island had begun the nineteenth century as one of a number of centres, in fact a rather minor one of pre-industrial sugar production located in tropical and sub-tropical Asia, from the Indian sub-continent through to the southernmost islands of Japan. It ended the century not only as by far the largest of Asia's producer-exporters of sugar but also critically as the sole example of the sustained and successful large-scale industrialisation of sugar manufacture anywhere in the East. Sugar Steam and Steel sets out to explain how and why this happened and what its implications were for the long-term trajectory of the Java sugar industry in the international sugar economy.

Expanding Frontiers in South Asian and World History Richard M. Eaton,Munis D. Faruqi,David Gilmartin,Sunil Kumar,2013-03-07 The book encapsulates discussions under the rubric of frontiers in multiple contexts

Colonial Exploitation and Economic Development Ewout Frankema,Frans Buelens,2013-03-12 Since many countries in the world at present were European colonies in the not so distant past the relationship between colonial institutions and development outcomes is a key topic of study across many disciplines This edited volume from a leading international group of scholars discusses the comparative legacy of colonial rule in the Netherlands Indies and Belgian Congo during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries Whereas the Indonesian economy progressed rapidly during the last three decades of the twentieth century and became a self reliant and assertive world power the Congo regressed into a state of political chaos and endemic violence To which extent do the different legacies of Dutch and Belgian rule explain these different development outcomes if they do at all By discussing the comparative features and development of Dutch and Belgian rule the book aims to 1 to contribute to a deeper understanding of the role of colonial institutional legacies in long run patterns of economic divergence in the modern era 2 to fill in a huge gap in the comparative colonial historical literature which focuses largely on the comparative evolution of the British French Spanish and Portuguese Empires 3 to add a focused and well motivated comparative case study to the increasing strand of literature analyzing the marked differences in economic and political development in Asia and Africa during the postcolonial era Covering such issues as agriculture manufacturing and foreign investment human capital fiscal policy labour coercion and mineral resource management this book offers a highly original and scholarly contribution to the literature on colonial history and development economics

Linking Destinies Peter Boomgaard,Dick Kooiman,Henk Schulte Nordholt,2008-01-01 Trade flows cities and kinship relations can all be seen as elements of complex networks In this collection of essays all of which deal with Asia we argue that there are good reasons to envisage them as various dimensions of the same networks Nevertheless it is fairly rare to find trade cities and kinship relations as intimately linked as we have portrayed them in this volume because they are usually classified within different sub disciplines of history whose practitioners are all too often not inclined to talk to people outside their own field The Australian born historian Heather Sutherland who recently retired from the VU university in Amsterdam is an exception in this respect because most of her work gravitates towards an approach which aims to integrate this trinity of topics This collection of essays written by a number of her students and close colleagues has taken its cue from her approach It is not the case that all the contributions deal with all three topics but they as a collective demonstrate how flows of trade cities both as urban centres and nodes in wider networks and kinship relations hang together and how the study of one topic opens new vistas on the other two revealing causal links that otherwise would have remained hidden Thus the essays in this collective volume support the idea that trade towns and kin although often dealt with quite separately can be viewed as various aspects of the same networks connecting people places and commodities The Adaptable Peasant

Nirmal Ranjith Dewasiri, 2008 This study analyses how in early colonial times the peasant society of Sri Lanka underwent fundamental changes in the land tenure system as it faced the arrival of the Dutch East India Company administration s merchant capitalism Merchant Communities in Asia, 1600-1980 Madeleine Zelin, 2015-10-06 This book is the first to use local primary sources to explore the interaction between foreign and native merchants in Asian countries Contributors discuss the different economic political and cultural conditions that gave rise to a variety of merchant communities in Korea China Japan Taiwan the Philippines Singapore and India Dutch Commerce and Chinese Merchants in Java Alexander Claver, 2014-01-09 Dutch Commerce and Chinese Merchants in Java describes the vanished commercial world of colonial Java Alexander Claver shows the challenges of a demanding business environment by highlighting trade and finance mechanisms and the relationships between the participants involved In the Shadow of the Company: The Dutch East India

Company and its Servants in the Period of its Decline (1740-1796) Chris Nierstrasz, 2012-08-27 Is there any truth in the story that the morality of the servants of the Dutch East India Company in the eighteenth century was so rotten that one should believe the Dutch maxim Vergaan Onder Corruptie in translation something like Succumbed to Corruption and use this as an explanation for a very complex phenomenon Chris Nierstrasz introduces us in his In the Shadow of the Company to the realities of the decision makers and of the servants in the field Responding to the changing realities in Asia the Company could only try to use the mercantile potential of its higher echelons to postpone its downfall In a situation in which the directors were not able to increase investment from Holland the servants in Asia were forced to take up the challenge

Credit and Debt in Indonesia, 860-1930 David Henley, Peter Boomgaard, 2009 Credit and debt are practical concerns of all times and places They are also increasingly important topics in economic history and the social sciences from Marcel Mauss and the anthropology of the gift to the urgent quest for understanding of today s global credit crunch This volume brings together eight essays on credit and debt in the history of Indonesia where for centuries debt and debt bondage played central roles in the organization of society and where efforts to combat usury and free peasants from indebtedness were central to the ethical and nationalist movements of the late colonial period Topics range from the inscriptions of ninth century Java to the first global financial crisis in 1930 and from Islamic laws against the charging of interest to the role of Chinese temples and Dutch church charities as credit providers The history of credit and debt in Indonesia is examined from a wide variety of perspectives legal institutional and cultural as well as economic Attention is paid to parallels and contrasts with more recent developments including the Asian financial crisis of 1997 and Indonesia's rise to fame as a pioneer of the current global microfinance revolution

Forgotten People: Poverty, Risk and Social Security in Indonesia Gerben Nooteboom, 2014-11-28 In Forgotten People Gerben Nooteboom describes and analyses the livelihoods and social security of peasants and migrant Madurese. It offers a new way to categorise and analyse livelihood security of marginal people in Indonesia by using the concept of style.

Shaping Medan Dirk Aedsge Buiskool, 2024-12-02 The City of Medan on Sumatra emerged from the large scale plantation industry. The plantations were characterized by harsh labor conditions and frequently described as an area of suppression and struggle. In contrast the city of Medan itself maintained a relatively harmonious atmosphere. A significant factor contributing to this harmony was the influence of nine Chinese businessmen. This book featuring previously unpublished archival materials and interviews explores the contributions of these prominent Chinese figures to Medan's economic social healthcare and politics.

Islam and the European Empires David Motadel, 2014-09-05 At the height of the imperial age European powers ruled over most parts of the Islamic world. The British French Russian and Dutch empires each governed more Muslims than any independent Muslim state. European officials believed Islam to be of great political significance and were quite cautious when it came to matters of the religious life of their Muslim subjects. In the colonies they regularly employed Islamic religious leaders and institutions to bolster imperial rule. At the same time the European presence in Muslim lands was confronted by religious resistance movements and Islamic insurgency. Across the globe from the West African savanna to the shores of Southeast Asia Muslim rebels called for holy war against non Muslim intruders. Islam and the European Empires presents the first comparative account of the engagement of all major European empires with Islam.

Bringing together fifteen of the world's leading scholars in the field the volume explores a wide array of themes ranging from the accommodation of Islam under imperial rule to Islamic anti colonial resistance A truly global history of empire the volume makes a major contribution not only to our knowledge of the intersection of Islam and imperialism but also more generally to our understanding of religion and power in the modern world
