ABSTRACT

This study aims to investigate the effect of the Small-Scale Chemistry Lab to improving the cognitive abilities of students who are studying colloid properties. Cognitive abilities studied are according to Bloom's taxonomy. The research conducted was pre-experiment with one group pre-test post-test design. Participants involved in this study were 40 students of class XI high school in Bandung Regency. The instruments used in the study included a written test and questionnaires. The instruments in this study used the content validity test by supervisors who are experienced in small-scale chemistry lab. Beside that, a reliability test was also carried out with value 0.79. The increased cognitive abilities calculated based on the difference pre-test and post-test scores using the N-gain formula, the data has been processed are then analyzed descriptively. The results showed that most of the students' cognitive abilities had increased as indicated by the N-gain value 0.63. Based on these findings, it is recommended that small-scale chemistry lab can be applied to the learning process of other chemistry topics that have a characteristic compatibility between the learning material and small-scale chemistry lab for the development of students' cognitive abilities.

1. INTRODUCTION

Chemistry is a core science which is often considered difficult because some of its concepts are abstract [1]. Student perspectives on chemistry need to be addressed with a correct concept of knowledge, so that student can provide predictions or explanations about chemistry correctly [2]. Student-centered teaching approaches has a lot of advantages for teaching of chemistry topics [3]. [4] said that meaningful learning is possible in the laboratory because student is given the opportunities to manipulate equipment and materials in an environment suitable for them to construct their knowledge of phenomena and related scientific concept. [5] provide an opinion that practicum has an important role in science education and he suggested that there are a lot of benefits in learning derived from that activity.

In any levels of chemistry learning practicum activities are important because chemistry is an experimental science [6]. According to [7] said that chemistry laboratory activities should gained understanding because that activities help students to define something about chemistry by their experience. Although practicum has a lot of advantages, in fact practicum is still rarely implemented on chemistry learning activities for several reasons.

In general, practicum activities carried out in schools today are practicum using macro-scale. Because the practicum uses materials on a macro scale, the waste that will be produced is in large quantities and it caused environmental pollution. Small-scale chemical lab has the advantage of reducing the use of chemicals substances so the amount of waste produced is reduced [8]. The reduced
