ABSTRACT

A recent study into the archaeological profession in 21 European countries resulted in recognising gender equality as a major topic that needs attention. The overall trend is that women will form the future majority of workers in archaeology. However, the conditions under which women work differ by country, and in several countries, women are paid less and are not well represented in leadership positions. Gender equality needs to be put on the agenda and each country should take measurements to close the gap.

Résumé: Une étude récente sur le métier d'archéologue dans 21 pays européens a eu pour effet de considérer l'égalité des sexes comme un sujet important qui nécessite une attention particulière. La tendance générale qui se dégage veut que les femmes constitueront à l'avenir la majeure partie des travailleurs dans l'archéologie. Toutefois, les conditions dans lesquelles les femmes travaillent diffèrent d'un pays à l'autre et, dans plusieurs d'entre eux, elles sont moins payées et sont peu représentées aux postes de direction. L'égalité des sexes doit devenir une préoccupation majeure, et chaque pays doit prendre des mesures pour réduire cet écart.

Resumen: Un estudio reciente sobre la profesión arqueológica en 21 países europeos dio como resultado el reconocimiento de la igualdad de género como un tema de importancia que necesita atención. La tendencia global es que las mujeres formarán la futura mayoría de trabajadores en

The Future Of European Archaeology:

The Future of European Archaeology Willem J. H. Willems, 1999 The Future of European Archaeology W. J. H. Willems, 1999 As head of the Dutch Archaeological Service Willem Willems is uniquely in touch with the movement towards greater archaeological cooperation in Europe As political borders lose their importance archaeology is forced into the forefront of the quest for a new cultural identity to reflect both the unity and heterogeneity of European society With extensive references to European legislation and community programmes Dr Willems sets out his controversial vision of a pan European coordinating body for archaeological research and heritage management in the 21st century Professional archaeologists cannot afford to ignore this authoritative vision of a centrally organised future The Future of Archaeology Gary M. Feinman, T Douglas Price, 2025-09-01 In recent decades an expanding cadre of archaeologists has embarked to the field and laboratories Their endeavors have sparked the collection of troves of data about worldwide pasts at multiple scales from the molecular to the macroregional Investigation has been amplified by new technologies including computers satellite imagery mass spectrometry and sequencers for ancient DNA As information rich findings are rapidly being deciphered it is clear that the temporal depth and global breadth of archaeological discoveries are sufficiently rich to inform us regarding key contemporary issues sustainability inequality governance well being and heritage Ernest Hooten once described archaeologists as the senile playboys of science rooting in the rubbish heaps of antiquity Although Hooten's view of archaeology as an esoteric discipline remains intact in some quarters clearly times have changed and in this volume a diverse suite of archaeologists marshal their thoughts regarding the current state and future of the discipline A Future for Archaeology Robert Layton, Stephen Shennan, Peter Stone, 2016-09-16 Over the last thirty years issues of culture identity and meaning have moved out of the academic sphere to become central to politics and society at all levels from the local to the global Archaeology has been at the forefront of these moves towards a greater engagement with the non academic world often in an extremely practical and direct way for example in the disputes about the repatriation of human burials Such disputes have been central to the recognition that previously marginalized groups have rights in their own past that are important for their future The essays in this book look back at some of the most important events where a role for an archaeology concerned with the past in the present first emerged and look forward to the practical and theoretical issues now central to a socially engaged discipline and shaping its future This book is published in honor of Professor Peter Ucko who has played an unparalleled role in promoting awareness of the core issues in this volume among archaeologists The Future of European Archaeology H. J. Willems, 1999 National-Socialist Archaeology in Europe and its Legacies Martijn Eickhoff, Daniel Modl, Katie Meheux, Erwin Nuijten, 2023-08-14 This edited volume is dedicated to national socialist archaeology as a Europe wide phenomenon It analyses national socialist attempts to denationalize the archaeologies of European nations by creating a new unifying European archaeology on a racial basis From the beginning of the nineteenth century archaeology began to develop into an important force behind processes of nation building. At the same time structures of transnational academic collaboration contributed strongly to the internal dynamics of the research field which was primarily organized on a national basis. In those European countries that were confronted with national socialist occupation and repression between 1939 and 1945 these transnational archaeological networks were to prove crucial for the development of national socialist archaeological policies. This volume will reveal how national socialist archaeology was to a extent valued positively in its time as highly innovative even influencing the archaeology of non occupied countries. Although in the final instance it generally failed to displace the national archaeologies in Europe the volume also analyses the long term impact of national socialist rule on the development of European archaeology. How did the attempts to create a unified European archaeology after 1945 continue to influence networks methods and terminologies institutional structures or popular representations of the early past?
