Stevens, 2002-02-28 Empirically based the daily experience of adolescent black females is explicated within an explanatory model of social context and developmental theory The author argues that adolescence must be seen from strengths and health perspectives Self relatedness or intersubjectivity expressed in assertion empathy and recognition is the core matrix of development where social contextual responses can be adaptive or maladaptive Why Girls Fight Cindy D.

Ness, 2010-08-01 In low income U S cities street fights between teenage girls are common These fights take place at school on street corners or in parks when one girl provokes another to the point that she must either step up or be labeled a punk Typically when girls engage in violence that is not strictly self defense they are labeled delinquent their actions taken as a sign of emotional pathology However in Why Girls Fight Cindy D Ness demonstrates that in poor urban areas this kind of street fighting is seen as a normal part of girlhood and a necessary way to earn respect among peers as well as a way for girls to attain a sense of mastery and self esteem in a social setting where legal opportunities for achievement are not otherwise easily available Ness spent almost two years in west and northeast Philadelphia to get a sense of how teenage girls experience inflicting physical harm and the meanings they assign to it While most existing work on girls violence deals exclusively with gangs Ness sheds new light on the everyday street fighting of urban girls arguing that different cultural standards associated with race and class influence the relationship that girls have to physical aggression Black
