Chris Fields, 2016-08-18 Human beings experience a world of objects bounded entities that occupy space and persist through time Our actions are directed toward objects and our language describes objects We categorize objects into kinds that have different typical properties and behaviors We regard some kinds of objects each other for example as animate agents capable of independent experience and action while we regard other kinds of objects as inert We re identify objects immediately and without conscious deliberation after days or even years of non observation and often following changes in the features locations or contexts of the objects being re identified Comparative developmental and adult observations using a variety of approaches and methods have yielded a detailed understanding of object detection and recognition by the visual system and an advancing understanding of haptic and auditory information processing Many fundamental questions however remain unanswered What for example physically constitutes an object How do specific classically characterizable object boundaries emerge from the physical dynamics described by quantum theory and can this emergence process be described independently of any assumptions regarding the perceptual capabilities of observers How are visual motion and feature information combined to create object information How are the object trajectories that indicate persistence to human observers implemented and how are these trajectory representations bound to feature representations How for example are point light walkers recognized as single objects How are conflicts between trajectory driven and feature driven identifications of objects resolved for example in multiple object tracking situations Are there separate what and where processing streams for haptic and auditory perception Are there haptic and or auditory equivalents of the visual object file Are there equivalents of the visual object token How are object identification conflicts between different perceptual systems resolved Is the common assumption that persistent object is a fundamental innate category justified How does the ability to identify and categorize objects relate to the ability to name and describe them using language How are features that an individual object had in the past but does not have currently represented How are categorical constraints on how objects move or act represented and how do such constraints influence categorization and the re identification of individuals How do human beings re identify objects including each other as persistent individuals across changes in location context and features even after gaps in observation lasting months or years How do human capabilities for object categorization and re identification over time relate to those of other species and how do human infants develop these capabilities What can modeling approaches such as cognitive robotics tell us about the answers to these questions Primary research reports reviews and hypothesis and theory papers addressing questions relevant to the understanding of perceptual object segmentation categorization and individual identification at any scale and from any experimental or modeling perspective are solicited for this Research Topic Papers that review particular sets of issues from multiple disciplinary perspectives or that advance integrative hypotheses or models that take data from multiple experimental approaches into account are especially encouraged The Future Once Happened Here Frederick F. Siegel, 2000 Each of Siegel's three urban portraits New York Washington D C and Los Angeles shows the desperate remedies undertaken by cities searching for a lifeline back to the future whose promise they once seemed to embody In a narrative that acknowledges the large historical forces that have remade the face of America over the last three decades but insists that social policies are not merely foregone conclusions waiting to happen Siegel holds up a mirror to our urban nature and tells us much about the way we live now Paul Ricoeur's Hermeneutics and the Discourse of Mark 13 Peter C. de Vries, 2016-12-14 The apocalyptic discourse of Mark 13 predicts that cataclysmic events will occur within the generation of Jesus contemporaries but readers today know these events have not taken place Paul Ricoeur's hermeneutics enables a reader to understand this text as a presentation of truth rather than as a failed prediction Ricoeur argues that the meaning of a text is not defined by the author's intention nor by the reader's reception but by the text itself Therefore although Mark 13 was originally understood literally today's reader is able to read it as metaphor and to discern latent meaning that is present in the text As Ricoeur explains metaphor associates previously unrelated concepts and creates new multiple meanings In doing metaphor is able to present truth not as a verifiable presentation of the world but as a novel manifestation of the world Mark 13 functions as metaphor because of a double dissonance first between the configured world of the text and the lived world of the reader and second between claim that Jesus is able to predict when the events will take place v 30 and the assertion that he is not able to do so v 32 One option for the metaphorical meaning that Mark 13 offers for today's reader is the perception of the presence of forces that challenge and subvert powers which appear to be dominant and which deceive destroy and persecute This book will appeal to two sets of readers First scholars who study New Testament apocalyptic texts and the eschatological expectations of the early church will appreciate a new approach to a challenging subject matter Second Ricoeur scholars who focus upon the religious aspects of his work will enjoy the employment of his interpretive approach on a Biblical genre that has heretofore receive only cursory attention
