Hearing Voices Sarah Finley, 2019-02-01 Hearing Voices takes a fresh look at sound in the poetry and prose of colonial Latin American poet and nun Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz 1648-1714 A voracious autodidact Sor Juana engaged with early modern music culture in a way that resonates deeply in her writing Despite the privileging of harmony within Sor Juana's work however links between the poet's musical inheritance and subjects such as acoustics cognition writing and visual art have remained unexplored These lacunae have marginalized nonmusical auralities and contributed to the persistence of both ocularcentrism and a corresponding visual dominance in scholarship on Sor Juana and indeed in early modern cultural production in general As in many areas of her work Sor Juana's engagement with acoustical themes restructures gendered discourses and transposes them to a feminine key Hearing Voices focuses on these aural conceits in highlighting the importance of sound and in most cases its relationship with gender in Sor Juana's work and early modern culture Sarah Finley explores attitudes toward women's voices and music making intersections of music rhetoric and painting auralities in Baroque visual art sound and ritual and the connections between optics and acoustics Finley demonstrates how Sor Juana's striking auralities challenge ocularcentric interpretations and problematizes paradigms that pin vision to logos writing and other empirical models that traditionally favor men's voices Sound becomes a vehicle for women's agency and responds to anxiety about the female voice particularly in early modern convent culture
