

An illustration featuring a central scroll with the text "VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN ACT". The scroll is surrounded by numerous hands of various skin tones, some holding symbols like a feather, a lightbulb, a female symbol with a cross, a heart, a star, a scale of justice, a sword, a flower, a leaf, a paw print, a flame, and a heart with a face. The background is dark with white stars and symbols, creating a sense of unity and global support for the act.

Teaching About Violence Against Women:

HL 106, HC 594 - Violence Against Women and Girls Great Britain. Parliament. Joint Committee on Human Rights, 2015 The Government's progressive work on tackling violence against women and girls abroad is not translating into its domestic policy despite its Violence against Women and Girls Action Strategy and the Home Secretary's personal commitment to the issue The Committee warns that failure to provide adequate refuge spaces and specialist services for victims of violence against women and girls demonstrates the difficulty for the Government in fulfilling its international obligations under the Convention when decisions over commissioning of certain services has been devolved The Committee also expresses alarm at the prevalence of violence against women and girls across many cultures in the UK today and heard troubling evidence from many minority groups that represent women with particular needs The portrayal of women as victims of violence is deeply embedded in cultural stereotypes in the depiction of women in the media and in how women are treated in the asylum system This has to stop The Committee's recommendations include that schools should play a greater role and include issues of violence against women and girls within the PSHE curriculum whilst the Government has taken steps to engage with the media and with public awareness campaigns to counteract the sexualised portrayal of women noting that the BBC declined invitations to give evidence to this inquiry the media themselves should do more the Government look again at the payment of universal credit to couples because of its concerns that it could put women subject to domestic violence at risk
