questions the way that modern science and technology are considered able to liberate society from the erratic forces of nature Modern science is implicated in a gamble on a technological society that will replace the natural world with a better one The author questions the rationality of this gamble and its implications for our lives The Terrestrial Biosphere S.T.

Trudgill,2014-09-25 Terrestrial Biosphere tries to pose the questions which underlie the many sided debate of how to respond to and influence change How should we view nature What do we do for the best how should we act what are we trying to achieve and what should we be guided by In doing so the book introduces and attempts to analyse not only scientific aspects of the debate but also cultural attitudes and values the notions of ecosystem stability are now challenged and it is also clear that ecosystems are renewable but not repeatable It finds that prescriptive solutions based on current constructs may not be adequate Feeling that analysis should lead to advocacy the author believes that if we can t improve predictability

we have to increase adaptability which means that ecological and social capacity building should be advocated This is seen in terms of concepts institutions attitudes and values which allow for a plurality of meanings and which can cope with surprise and unforeseen change and which also facilitates responses to change Questioning Technology Andrew

Feenberg,2012-08-21 In this extraordinary introduction to the study of the philosophy of technology Andrew Feenberg argues that technological design is central to the social and political structure of modern societies Environmentalism information technology and medical advances testify to technology s crucial importance In his lucid and engaging style Feenberg shows that technology is the medium of daily life Every major technical changes reverberates at countless levels economic political and cultural If we continue to see the social and technical domains as being seperate then we are essentially denying an integral part of our existence and our place in a democratic society Questioning Tecchnology convinces us that it is vital that we learn more about technology the better to live with it and to manage it
