

A prominent feature of Frampton Cotterell since 1825 has been the windmill at the south end of Brockridge, at the intersection of Ryecroft and Woodend Roads. This 1950s photograph shows the mill to be completely redundant, with about 6ft of masonry removed. The chimney to the right is a relic from when the sails were removed and the driving of the mill stones was converted to steam power sometime in the 1860s. A 1301 survey states that Frampton Cotterell had three watermills and a windmill.
