

ROBERT GOLDSTON
THE CIVIL WAR IN SPAIN

THE CIVIL WAR IN SPAIN

In 1936 Spain's political tensions spilled into a bloody struggle between the elected government and the 'insurgents'. Most of the world's leaders merely watched this struggle, but Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin did not watch but acted while Britain, France and the United States gestured ideologically. The most bitter war in living memory had begun, a war in which one million Spaniards and many foreign participants were in peril.

Mr Goldston draws the complex threads of the conflict into a meaningful and most readable account. Many of the campaigns and events are described in detail, and these include the 1936 resistance in the Alcazar of Toledo, the siege of Madrid, where men, women and children built fortifications to save the city, the offensive against the freedom-loving Basques, the pitiful destruction of a loyal village which added a new name to world history—Guernica. The author also deals at some length with the part played by the International Brigades and the men who felt impelled to cross the line on the government side. They included, almost inevitably, men, women, poets, artists and intellectuals of all nations than had ever before volunteered as soldiers in any previous cause.
