

THE COLORADO RIVER VALLEY AND THE NEVER SUMMER MOUNTAINS

The Setting

The North Fork Colorado River flows southward from its headwaters in the park to Shadow Mountain Lake, then on to the southwest. To those who are familiar with the mighty Colorado that surges in roaring rapids or sluggishly moves as a reddish-brown snake through the deserts of Utah or along the bottom of the Grand Canyon, the North Fork is a different river. Here in the green mountain valley which is its source, the Colorado is a trout stream, rushing and clear and nearly small enough to wade or jump across. Near its source, volcanic rocks through which it flows in a V-shaped canyon impart to it a flavor not unlike the canyon of the Yellowstone. Farther down where the stream meanders through a flat valley, guest ranches lie in a picturesque setting of pines, aspens, and willows. And high overhead the Never Summer Mountains look upon the valley. This range, picturesque even to its name, is made of peaks quite different from any others in the park. They form the northwestern border of the park and are the backbone of the continent in this section. But by a curious positioning of mountain uplift and stream erosion, the streams which eventually flow to the Atlantic are on the west of the range, the Pacific-flowing Colorado is on the east.

The visitor may be reminded more of the Old West in this portion of the park than on the eastern side. Dude ranches, replete with horses, rail fences, and chuckwagons, are the common resorts here. Mining, as well as ranching, has left its fleeting mark in the presence of the remains of Lulu City and other mining villages. The crowds of those tourists who never seem to find what they are seeking, even in the mountains, are absent here. Instead the tourists of the western side are more relaxed. Perhaps this is because the area is not as close to the freeways, big cities, and large populations as the eastern side. When a little extra effort is required to reach a place, like driving over another high pass, the relaxed atmosphere seems to prevail more readily.

Trails in the Valley

Trail Ridge Road follows the valley of the North Fork Colorado from the park entrance near Grand Lake north for about twelve miles and then climbs through a series of switchbacks out of the valley to the east through Milner Pass and on to Estes Park. Trails into the river valley and the Never Summer Mountains begin from points along the highway. The main routes to the peaks and into the valley begin at Phantom Valley Parking Area on the west side of the road about eleven miles north of the park entrance and about two miles north of Timber Creek Campground. The Colorado River Trail and Red Mountain Trail start from here. The Colorado River Trail parallels the river and the road and connects the guest ranches in the valley to the south. A few hundred yards north of the parking area the trail meets a foot trail which drops down to it from a parking area on the highway. A register is located at the junction for the benefit of those who use the trail.

The Colorado River Trail continues north from the trail junction. One of the places of greatest interest for those hikers who like a short, scenic hike is Lulu City, the remains of a short-lived mining camp. Lulu City never was very big, and today nothing is left save a few log foundations and the broken down remains of one or two log cabins. A couple of log cabins are located about halfway to Lulu City on the trail, and these may be of interest to those who do not wish to hike the three miles to the site of Lulu City itself. The dump of one of the mines lies along the right side of the trail only a mile and one-quarter from the start of the trail.

To reach Lulu City hike north from the trail junction past the mine and Shipley cabins. The trail then bends to the right and climbs along the mountainside overlooking the valley below. Another junction is soon reached, well marked by a sign indicating the way to Lulu City and places to the north. The Lulu City trail drops into the valley again to reach Lulu City, one-half mile away. A small easel exhibit at the village site explains its short-lived history.

The La Poudre Pass Trail continues north along the side of the mountain from the fork with the Lulu City trail. Soon, however, the trail drops into the valley and crosses the stream after following the rocky stream banks a short way. A sign here tells the hiker that he is entering Little Yellowstone, so named because of the resemblance of the canyon to that in Yellowstone National Park, but a smaller edition, of course. After a short climb up the west side of the canyon, another junction is reached. A sign points toward La Poudre Pass, and another sign, difficult to see as you climb up to the junction, points to Thunder Pass. To continue to La Poudre Pass, take the right fork. The left one turns back to the southwest and joins the main Thunder Pass Trail which comes up from Lulu City.
