Charles A. Perry, Byron Neil Aldridge, H. C. Ross, 2001      U.S. Geological Survey Water-supply Paper, 1982      General Technical Report NRS, 2007      Water-resources Investigations Report, 2003      Hydro-Meteorological Hazards, Risks, and Disasters Paolo Paron, 2023-08-17 Hydro Meteorological Hazards Risks and Disasters 2e provides an integrated look at the major disasters that have had and continue to have major implications for many of the world's people such as floods and droughts. This new edition takes a geoscientific approach to the topic while also covering current thinking about some scientific issues that are socially relevant and can directly affect human lives and assets. This new edition showcases both academic and applied research conducted in developed and developing countries, allowing readers to see the most updated flood and drought modeling research and their applications in the real world, including for humanitarian emergency purposes. Hydro Meteorological Hazards Risks and Disasters 2e also contains new insights about how climate change affects hazardous processes. For the first time, information on the many diverse topics relevant to professionals is aggregated into one volume. It is a valuable reference to researchers, graduates, scientists, physical geographers, urban planners, landscape architects, and other people who work on the built environments of the world. Cutting edge discussion of natural hazard topics that affect the lives and livelihoods of millions of people worldwide. Includes numerous full color tables, GIS maps, diagrams, illustrations, and photographs of hazardous processes in action. Bibliography of Forest Water Yields, Flooding Issues, and the Hydrologic Modeling of Extreme Flood Events, 2007. Floods continue to cause significant damage in the United States and elsewhere, and questions about the causes of flooding continue to be debated. A significant amount of research has been conducted on the relationship between forest management activities and water yield, peak flows, and flooding; somewhat less research has been conducted on the modeling of these activities as related to flooding. This bibliography and online bibliographic database provide a searchable listing of more than 600 publications related to the interrelationships of forest and forest management on watershed and flood hydrology. Also included are publications related to the capability and limitations of currently available hydrologic models and modeling approaches, with particular emphasis on their utility for evaluating forest management effects.      LiDAR-derived

Reconstructing Human-landscape Interactions Lucy Wilson,Pamela J. Dickinson,Jason Jeandron,2007 Reconstructing Human Landscape Interactions demonstrates the high quality of work presented at the first Developing International Geoarchaeology conference DIG 2005 held in Saint John New Brunswick Canada and exemplifies the over riding theme of this discipline People have always used the landscape in many ways as a place to live as a place to grow crops as a source of natural resources Those actions leave their traces The characteristics of the landscape constrain which activities are possible just as social and cultural habits condition people TM s connection with the environment Geoarchaeology is about finding the traces of these interactions and using them to reconstruct how people in the past behaved in their environmental context The material covered in the proceedings ranges from broad themes of climate change and landscape use to more specific subjects such as river avulsion and the use of tidal ponds The papers move us from the land to the coastal margin and back onto land to examine particular techniques The final paper leads us beyond archaeology and points out that geoarchaeological data must contribute to the debate about the sustainability of present day land use practices a fitting challenge to take us into the future Monthly Catalogue, United States Public Documents ,1995
