This book brings together some of the finest academics in the field to address important questions around the way in which people experience their physical environments including temperature light air quality acoustics and so forth It is of importance not only to the comfort people feel indoors but also the success of any building as an environment for its stated purpose The way in which comfort is produced and perceived has a profound effect on the energy use of a building and its resilience to the increasing dangers posed by extreme weather events and power outages caused by climate change Research on thermal comfort is particularly important not only for the health and well being of occupants but because energy used for temperature control is responsible for a large part of the total energy budget of the built environment In recent years there has been an increasing focus on the vulnerabilities of the thermal comfort system how and why are buildings failing to provide safe and agreeable thermal environments at an affordable price Achieving comfort in buildings is a complex subject that involves physics behaviour physiology energy conservation climate change and of course architecture and urban design Bringing together the related disciplines in one volume lays strong multi disciplinary foundations for new research and design directions for resilient 21st century architecture This book heralds workable solutions and emerging directions for key fields in building the resilience of households organisations and populations in a heating world Materials for Architects and Builders Arthur Lyons, 2019-08-28

architecture Much of today's discussion about sustainable and green design revolves around efforts to clean or filter out these primitive elements While mostly the direct result of human habitation these subnatural forces are nothing new In fact our ability to manage these forces has long defined the limits of civilized life From its origins architecture has been engaged in both fighting and embracing these so called destructive forces In Subnature David Gissen author of our critically acclaimed Big and Green examines experimental work by today's leading designers scholars philosophers and biologists that rejects the idea that humans can somehow recreate a purely natural world free of the untidy elements that actually constitute nature Each chapter provides an examination of a particular form of subnature and its actualization in contemporary design practice The exhilarating and at times unsettling work featured in Subnature suggests an alternative view of natural processes and ecosystems and their relationships to human society and architecture R Sie n's Mosquito Bottleneck house in Trinidad uses a skin that actually attracts mosquitoes and moves them through the building while keeping them separate from the occupants In his building designs the architect Philippe Rahm draws the dank air from the earth and the gasses and moisture from our breath to define new forms of spatial experience In his Underground House Mollier House and Omnisport Hall Rahm forces us to consider the odor of soil and the emissions from our body as the natural context of a future architecture Cero 9's design for the Magic Mountain captures excess heat emitted from a power generator in Ames Iowa to fuel a rose garden that embellishes the industrial site and creates a natural mountain rising above the city's skyline Subnature looks beyond LEED ratings green roofs and solar panels toward a progressive architecture based on a radical new conception of nature
