Characteristics of Successful Technology CEOs Dora Vell, 2009 This Vell research report on Characteristics of Successful CEOs investigates whether common perceptions regarding the predictors of CEO success are valid The research uses data about public technology products companies in New England with over 100 M in revenues and their CEOs Our research examines the correlation or lack of between a company s performance and the CEO s education experience tenure age reliance on an independent Chair and whether the CEO came in as internal promotion vs external hire Not unexpectedly technology companies differ from other companies in many significant ways Although we work extensively with technology CEOs some of the findings were surprising to us For example the predominance of founders

among companies with revenues between 100 M 1 B was unexpected Each topic has three sections The Patterns Detected section summarizes the underlying distribution of our data set e g the percent of CEOs who were founders by company size The So Where Were the Differences section reports the correlation between corporate performance and the relevant characteristics e g founders vs non founders The Key Take Aways section highlights the most striking conclusions
