conducting research in war torn and divided societies has stimulated the contributors to analyse and critique issues such as the contribution of research to society the benefit of research to respondents and issues of objectivity issues of concern to all researchers However in the often stark circumstances in which the contributors work these issues take on an urgency and clarity that can potentially illuminate research practice generally The book deals with the methodological and ethical issues arising when researching conflicts in violently divided societies where there is no consensus about policing law and order the impartiality of the state or indeed about the legitimacy of the state itself With contributions from researchers who have worked in a range of very different divided societies around the world it examines the conditions under which such inquiry is conducted and looks at the obstacles that researchers face Researching Violently Divided Societies looks in detail at different case studies to offer a sound understanding of the most effective methodological approaches for improving responses to division and violence Chapters cover the role and function of research in divided societies in Africa the efficacy of research in Northern Ireland dilemmas of identification and ethnography research by insiders and outsiders research for empowerment in Cambodia the role of research in managing conflicts in Nigeria researching ethnic conflict in Post Soviet central Asia a first time researcher s experience in Bosnia the ethics of psychiatric research in war zones and a final comparison of policy
