Tingley,1923 Psychosocial and Policy Issues in the World of Work ,1995 Journal of Human Services Abstracts ,1980 The Sustainability Curriculum Cedric Cullingford,John Blewitt,2013 The links between education and sustainable development are deepening although subject to much controversy and debate The success of the sustainability discourse depends both on the pedagogic and research functions of higher education Similarly for higher education itself to remain relevant and engaged it faces pressure not only to integrate the insights and lessons drawn from the perspective of sustainable development but also to be responsive to scrutiny of its own practices in relation to sustainability Among professionals in higher education sustainable development has its supporters and detractors It is embraced by some individuals and departments while being perceived by others as a threat to the coherence of particular disciplines Although it is not currently an academic discipline in its own right increasing public and professional familiarity with the term and the increasing urgency of global calls for the implementation of sustainable development mean that this is rapidly changing This volume analyses the impact of the concepts and practices of sustainability and sustainable development on various academic disciplines institutional practices fields of study and methods of enquiry The contributors drawn from a wide range of disciplines perspectives educational levels and institutional contexts examine the purpose of the modern university and the nature of sustainable education which includes exploring links to social movements for sustainability projects curriculum change culture and biodiversity values relating to gender equality and global responsibility and case studies on the transformation or otherwise of some specific disciplines Liberal Peacebuilding and the Locus of Legitimacy David Roberts,2016-02-05 Liberal peacebuilding too often builds neither peace nor Liberalism In a growing number of cases people aren't rejecting and relegating democracy because it's bad; they're challenging it because it isn't relevant to their priorities and needs. The peacebuilding moment when consent for intervention is present and the opportunity to build a sustainable social contract between peacebuilders and people is most fruitful is being squandered. This relationship between governed and governance relies on mutual needs realization but there is no formal or informal requirement and mechanism for ascertaining what the subjects of peacebuilding might prioritize. Instead, peacebuilders give the subjects of peacebuilding what they think they should have. This legitimacy gap between what peacebuilders give and what subjects want is the subject of this book. Through a range of empirical case studies conducted by country specialists, the book reveals that when asked, people often prioritize roads, electricity, jobs, housing, schooling, and pertinent justice amongst other things in the immediate aftermath of war. We find that mapping this locus of legitimacy may help develop the kind of relationship upon which the sustainability of any social contract between governed and governance rests. This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Intervention and Statebuilding.

The Nonprofit Sector: Partner in Civil Society, Reaching the City Gary Fujino, Timothy R. Sisk, Tereso C. Casino, 2012-06-28 Rapid urbanization and globalization processes worldwide have changed the landscape of our times. In Asia and Africa, the number of urban dwellers increases by an average of one million per week according to the United Nations. More than half of the globe's seven billion human beings now live in cities. These realities have far-reaching implications for mission in urban contexts at the start of the third millennium. Reaching the City: Reflections on Urban Mission for the Twenty-first Century seeks to address the missiological challenges associated with this new world order. Each author in this collection respectfully builds upon the significant contributions of seminal writers such as Ray Bakke, Jacques Ellul, Basil of Caesarea, and others while making new and creative proposals for urban mission in our world today. Beginning with the bigger picture of the global challenges of urbanization and moving through theological, historical, and educational perspectives, this volume concludes with a rich bevy of case studies engaging these new realities of both North American and international cities to encourage a missional thrust to reach these communities.
