Individuals as Producers of Their Own Development Richard M. Lerner, 2021-03-30. In the World Library of Psychologists series, international experts present career-long collections of what they judge to be their most interesting publications, extracts from books, key articles, research findings, and practical and theoretical contributions. Professor Richard M. Lerner has been prominent in the application of developmental science across the life span for half a century, investigating dynamic relational development systems and their potential impact on positive youth development (PYD) and social justice. In this collection, Professor Lerner presents the development of his theory of and research about relations between life span human development and contextual or ecological change, exploring the mutually influential relations between humans and their peer, family, school, and community contexts. Including a specially written introduction in which Professor Lerner reflects on the importance of mentorship and contextualises both the field and the evolution of his wide-ranging career, this collection will be a valuable resource for students and researchers of developmental psychology.

Moving into Adolescence Roberta G. Simmons, 2017-07-05. From the sociological point of view, adolescence traditionally has been described as a period of physical maturity and social immaturity. Adolescents reach physical adulthood before they are capable of functioning well in adult social roles. The disjunction between physical capabilities and socially allowed independence and power, and the concurrent status ambiguities, are viewed as stressful for the adolescent in modern Western society. It has been assumed that the need to disengage from parents during these years will result in high levels of rebellion and parent-child conflict. Moving into Adolescence follows students as they make a major life course transition from childhood into early adolescence. Substantial controversy has been generated within the behavioral sciences concerning the difficulty of adolescence as a transitional period. On the one hand, there are those who characterize the period as an exceptionally and necessarily stressful time in the life course On the other hand many investigators treat this view of adolescence as their straw man To them the supposed tumult of adolescence is just that supposed and mythical The purpose of this book is to study the transition from childhood into early and middle adolescence in order to investigate change along a wide variety of psychosocial dimensions with a particular focus on the self image The authors investigate the impact of timing of pubertal change and also the movement from an intimate elementary school context into a large scale secondary school environment The first major movement into a large scale organizational context may cause difficulty for the child as may the dramatic changes of puberty In addition gender differences and changes in gender differences are studied Both short and long term consequences of transition are examined focusing on is the role of pubertal change and school transition The
