Sugar Workers:

Jamaica And The Sugar Worker Cooperatives Carl Henry Feuer, 2019-03-13 Between 1974 and 1977 as part of a wider attempt by Prime Minister Michael Manley's regime to carry out a democratic reformist strategy of development the three largest sugar estates in Jamaica were converted into worker managed farms Within a few years however the cooperative program was in disarray as the farms faced economic setbacks and as political conflicts developed among the sugar workers local authorities and the government Drawing on his extensive field research in Jamaica Dr Feuer traces the development and decline of the cooperative system and discusses the implications for the possibility of democratic reform In his view the logic of the cooperativization process conflicted with the priorities of the middle class which continued to dominate the Jamaican economy As a result the reforms were never firmly rooted in a political coalition with the resources to carry them out In light of the Jamaican experience Dr Feuer considers such questions as What are the obstacles a nonrevolutionary regime is likely to face in an effort to help the poor How feasible is it to mobilize the requisite political and administrative resources and neutralize the inherent constraints to reform

Plant Closures Gilda Haas, 1985 Presents the real causes of plant shutdowns mergers new technologies and worldwide domination of production by multinational corporations

The sugar sub-sector in ACP countries in the post-2017 era Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2018-07-25 The elimination of the European Union EU production quotas on 30 September 2017 and the continuing negotiations over the reciprocity of preferential access between the EU and the countries of the Africa Caribbean Pacific ACP group have prompted the need to examine the future of the ACP sugar industry The ACP is concerned that the elimination of EU production quotas may lead to a reduction in sugar imports by the EU from 3.7 million tonnes to just under 1.5 million tonnes by 2022 The reciprocity of preferential access that is being negotiated under the Economic Partnership Agreement EPA between the EU and the ACP could further reduce EU sugar imports Addressing these concerns is important for policy making because in many low income ACP countries the sugar industry remains one of the major sources of both foreign exchange and employment Therefore sugar policy inevitably influences economic and agricultural developments in these countries The purpose of this study is to analyse the impact of the elimination of the European Union sugar production quotas on ACP sugar production and trade as well as on welfare including farmers welfare and to examine the feasible options that the ACP sugar subsectors are considering to mitigate the brunt of this policy change particularly as it will affect sugar farmers and workers
