 Canadian telecasts in September 1952 TV had conquered the country Why was the little screen so enthusiastically welcomed by Canadians Was television in its early years more innovative less commerical and more Canadian than current than current offerings In this study of what is often called the golden age of television Paul Rutherford has set out to dispel some cherished myths and to resurrect the memory of a noble experiment in the making of Canadian culture He focuses on three key aspects of the story The first is the development of the national service including the critical acclaim won by Radio Canada the struggles of the CBC s English service to provide mass entertainment that could compete with the Hollywood product and the effective challenge of private television to the whole dream of public broadcasting The second deals with the wealth of made in Canada programming available to please and inform vviewers even commercials receive close attention Altogether Rutherford argues Canadian programming reflected as well as enhanced the prevailing values and assumptions of the mainstream The final focus is on McLuhan s Question What happens to society when a new medium of communications enters the picture Rutherford s findings cast doubt upon the common presumptions about the awesome power of television Television in Canada Rutherford concludes amounts to a failed revolution It never realized the ambbbitions of its masters or the fears of its critics Its course was shaped not only by the will of the government the power of commerce and the empire of Hollywood but also by the desires and habits of the viewers      Writing Between the Lines Agnes Whitfield,2006 The essays in Writing between the Lines explore the lives of twelve of Canada s most eminent anglophone literary translators and delve into how these individuals have contributed to the valuable process of literary exchange between francophone and anglophone literatures in Canada Containing original detailed biographical and bibliographical material Writing between the Lines offers many new insights into the literary translation process and the diverse roles of the translator as social agent The first text on Canadian anglophone translators it makes a major contribution in the areas of literary translation comparative
