

Ethical Problems of Abortion*

This paper falls into three distinct sections. In the first I will resume briefly the position of the Roman Catholic Church and of the other churches in their official statements and current theological opinion. It will help to set these positions in their historical and christian context. The second section will seek to isolate the immediate key and controverted issues in this ethical and christian tradition. The third and final section will consider some of the wider issues involved in discussing ethical problems of abortion. In this way it is hoped to set the discussion in its total framework.

I. THE CHRISTIAN POSITION ON ABORTION

Two reservations are in order here. I obviously cannot in the space available give a comprehensive account of all the positions held by Christians, past and present. In fact I will be mainly concerned with the position of my own church, the Roman Catholic as it is the one I know best. However, I consider it helpful to include here some account of non-Roman positions, at least, as further examples of how the common tradition has developed.

The second reservation concerns the propriety of considering abortion in Christian terms at all. It might seem that the title 'Ethical Problems of Abortion', suggests a non-religious approach and that this would be the only profitable one in our post-christian world. As a matter of history the Christian tradition provides the most considerable body of thought on the subject. As a way into the discussion, which should not of course obscure ethical analysis by religious authority or sentiment, the Christian position is invaluable. Any particular statement of it may not be regarded as preventing further discussion but as a stimulus to it.

(a) THE CHRISTIAN CHURCHES TODAY

(i) Roman Catholic Position

The present official position in the Roman Catholic Church was clearly and firmly laid down in the encyclical Casti Connubii of Pius IX in 1930,¹ reinforced by Pius XII in his Address to the Italian Catholic

Quest for Human Dignity in the Ethics of Pregnancy Termination describes and analyzes the problem of termination of pregnancy with special attention to its prevalence in Kenya where more than seven hundred abortions are performed daily on girls between fifteen and seventeen years of age Although pregnancy termination is illegal in Kenya its practice goes on in the rural villages in homes in urban streets and in private clinics The book focuses on the ethical quest for human dignity in the context of the church s response to the challenge of termination of pregnancy It examines the perceptions and attitudes of various cadres of Christians such as church ministers doctors and lawyers towards the problem The book proposes ways and means by which the church in Kenya can approach the challenge of termination of pregnancy including those pregnancies arising out of rape and incest Findings support the current legal framework that prohibits pregnancy termination but reveal a desire for change in the way the church deals with members who get unplanned pregnancies and those who terminate the same. The book suggests in addition that the church's role should emphasize counseling, teaching, and pastoral care rather than excommunication and public rebuke.
