Minding the Body Ellyn Kaschak,2014-01-27 Support and empower women who are coping with the pain fear and stigma of serious disease Being diagnosed with cancer chronic fatigue syndrome or fibromyalgia is a traumatic event that takes place at a time when the patient is already feeling physically and often emotionally drained Minding the Body combines feminist and social constructionist approaches to offer an intimate look into the ways a therapist can help clients cope with the pain fear and stigma of serious disease Minding the Body offers an alternative to the reductive view of the mind body connection and also examines the potential for growth that such experiences often allow The essays gathered here show how an effective therapist can help the client deal with the painful and difficult emotions that exacerbate illness while learning the emotional and spiritual lessons illness can teach Minding the Body presents both theoretical views and personal accounts of illness including scholarly discussions of the issues involved in autoimmune disorders a therapist's personal experience of chronic fatigue syndrome a personal and professional exposition of a woman's struggles with injury illness and managed care co-written by client and therapist suggestions for understanding the social construction of illness and treating disease from a social constructivist point of view narratives reflecting on the change and growth of therapists diagnosed with cancer and other serious illnesses By looking at illness in the context of mind body society and medical establishment Minding the Body will help therapists doctors nurses counselors and clients deal with the grief disappointment and frustration of chronic and life threatening illness

The College Woman's Handbook Rachel Dobkin, Shana Sippy, 1995-01-01 Covers academic life financial matters health sexuality security issues job hunting and other areas as they relate to the experiences of women undergraduates
